

June 8, 1939

My dear Mr. De Vivier:

I am distressed that your note has lain so long without an answer. I have been away for some weeks on a rather exhausting piece of College work. I came back to so crowded a desk that I am only just beginning to see my way through and to dare go off for a few day's rest which I need very much.

It distresses me to go without seeing you and Mrs. De Vivier, but I am hoping that you will both be here when I return around the twentieth of the month. I certainly shall try to find you using the address in this note, so that we may have a visit.

I am so glad that you found "All in the Day's Work" worth reading. What you say of it pleases me greatly.

Looking forward to seeing you later in the month

Very sincerely yours