that event quite dazed and helpless. "Everything is going away from me," he almost sobbed. "I am being left alone." His own death followed a stroke of apoplexy. Rockefeller a few days later produced a mild sensation by appearing once more at 26 Broadway. Rogers's death necessitated attention to certain matters and this had brought the more or less retired oil man to his old office. It was his last visit to those old haunts."

It was early in this year that he had had a stroke of paralysis which put him out of commission during the worst of this excitement.
