My dear Miss Tarbell:

Unless I misunderstood your letter you have, for some reason, failed to receive the paged proofs of the text of the Lincoln which have been sent you. I am forwarding our office file by express this morning and have wired you to the effect that it is being sent.

The pages of this file have black marginal lines around them, showing that the plates have been made, but of course they answer every purpose in the preparation of the notes.

The address to which we have sent these proofs is the same as in your letter and I cannot account for their failing to reach you.

If there is still a misunderstanding between us, will you not kindly write me in detail by return mail, and oblige.

Very truly yours,

W. H. Greeley

Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
