My dear Miss Tarbell:

Following my letter of October 3, you may be interested in reading the letter I received from Mr. Robert V. Fleming, of the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D. C., dated October 3.

When you have read this letter, will you kindly return it to me, and we will have a conversation about it in the near future.

With best wishes, I am

Yours very truly,

Alfred Howell

Fleming, President of Riggs Bank, Washington

Howell that Lincoln only had a checking account at their bank It opened in April 1861 with a deposit of the monthly salary of $2083.33. Thinks there is nothing in the account which would help our inquiry.
