She did not by any means always give vent in La Porte to her views. Her visit in 1856 - during the Whig & Fillmore campaign was a trial. Her advice, She was for Fillmore & the American party of which he was the candidate - for the presidency. He was a good man - he had made a good president. That - she pointed to see them vote - moreover he was against the Irish - "the Mick Irish" called them - & more the Scotch Irish "If some of you Kentuckians and Virginians with the Democrats or Horse keepers are sometimes called upon to do, the Scotch Irish are certainly dead-Fillmore men - time she will - & certain from Scotch,
