Dear Miss Tarbell,

During the last three weeks the boys of Brunswick School have been bringing in books and magazines to replace the library of 5000 books which we lost by fire some months ago. To date they have brought in 250 books and 300 magazines. They themselves are running the library.

They are working hard and conscientiously and their efforts should, I feel, be rewarded. I am therefore writing to a group of four writers in the hope that they will see fit to contribute books to our library because of their interest in boys and in education which students themselves carry on of their own free will.

We should like very much to have copies of any books you might be willing to send and if you would autograph them for the Brunswick boys, they would be delighted.

I sincerely hope this effort appeals to you.

Cordially,

Leonard S. Kenworthy
