At the dinner to Viscount Cecil on December 29, 1924, I sat beside Raymond Fosdick. He told me that he saw Wilson frequently in the last years of his life and that on one occasion, talking about the League of Nations, he said, in effect, "I am not discouraged. I know that the thought and intent behind the League of Nations is the right one. What may happen to that organization in its development does not destroy the fundamental truth. God has some plan in this which we do not understand. It is better that things should have taken this course." Take this up with Fosdick.
