

My dear Miss Tarbell;
It has long been a puzzle & mystery that you did not interview my father Marcus Hurling of Uil City, one of the original directors of the Standard Uil Co., who fought single handed and argued to convince the other members they were wrong & would become the much & a monophy squeezing out the little fellow. When a small child we then lived in Eminton Pa. My Father came home from the Standard meetings & said to my mother, "Well I lost out today they were all opposed to my ideas." I am going to step down & out of the Standard as I will not belong to an organization that wipes out & becomes too much of a monopoly, against my principles. You could have got the first hand information from him of the inner workings of the Standard.

& if my Father was not living when you wrote the article, my brother Melvin J. Kulings was a member of the State Legislature of Pa, and fought the rebates, & later was in Congress in Washington D.C.
There must have been some reason why his name was never mentioned.

Please let me know about it, Hoping to have the pleasure of hearing from you.

Very Sincerely,

Adelaide Hulings Kappel
