Dear Miss Reynolds:

How kind of you to take the trouble to write me that you enjoyed my book. It was rather fun setting down the story of McClure's magazine as I saw it. Of course there was much more that I might have written, and many more people who figured in the enterprise, but I did not want to get the account too long or too confused. After all, Mr. McClure and John Phillips were the two creators.

I have been taking a rest in the country but am getting back to town after Labor Day and to work. I have an article on hand now which, when it is done, I would like to have you place if you would care to bother with it. How about it?

Please remember me most kindly to Mrs. Reynolds.

Very sincerely,

Mr. Paul R. Reynolds
