My dear Miss Mason:

Thank you heartily for your letter of the twenty first. Of course I remember that visit to you and your mother. One who goes on a barnstorming lecture tour does not often have so interesting and pleasant an experience as that was to me. I remember our supper and my interest in the work you and your mother were carrying on and particularly the long view down the valley.

I remember, too, your coming to New York and putting you in touch with Viola Roseboro.

I am glad you have not forgotten her. She is one of the most gallant women I know and keeping up her interest in life ~~in~~ a way which shames me. Her eyes are very bad and her strength is so very little that she has to work with the greatest care. She has to protect herself in every way, but she does not give up her interest in her old friends and in their work. I am sure if you write her she will be more than happy to hear from you. Her address is:-
173 Rockland Avenue, New Dorp, Staten Island, New York.

Thanking you again for your letter and wishing you and your mother health and happiness, believe me

Very sincerely yours

Miss Margaret Mason
