Dear Mr. Marshall:

You were good enough to tell me that any questions I asked for my Westinghouse article you would answer or would have answered. Now here are several -

First, Could you and would you give me a copy of the photograph of the Westinghouse bridge used in the pamphlet, "Dedication of the George Westinghouse Bridge" which I suppose was distributed at the ceremony? It is the one with the bridge in the foreground and the plant below and beyond.

Second, Can you give me a half dozen examples of valuable suggestions recently made by employees? I notice in your little folder on Industrial Relations that there is quite an extraordinary response, but what I would like would be a few unusual suggestions. If possible coming both from machine operatives as well as those higher up. How about your sales force - do you get suggestions from them?

I am centering this article on your training system. You strike me as a first class educational institution. I want to know how far women take advantage of your student courses. Have you now any one in your plants that promises to be a Miss Bertha Lamme? Would a woman be admitted to your general Engineering Class, the Design Class? Perhaps you could put me in touch with some woman in a responsible position who could give me an idea from her personal experience of what the Westinghouse training offers women.

Does that private Club in the engineering laboratory - "The Laminations" - still go on? What a sound educator that man Lamme was. Your educational program in its spirit at least is deeply indebted to him, don't you think?

Have you announced your plan to let Ancturus start the Chicago fair next summer? I would like the facts.

I shall be greatly obliged to you, dear Mr. Marshall, if you can secure answers to these queries.

Very sincerely yours
