

W
/

New York, May 28, 1918.

Miss Van Rensselaer,
U. S. Food Administration,
Home Conservation Division,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Van Rensselaer:

I was sorry not to see you before I left Washington but I was tied to my desk at the Women's Committee each moment.

I wanted to ask you what you would think of sending the circulars that go out from the Conservation Division directly to the Publicity Chairman of the Women's Committee. We have them now in all but four states and as a rule they are pretty active people. They have access to the little papers in the state through local assistance and often will go over things that I doubt could be put over in any other way. Do you object to sending directly to them your circulars, for instance, these Wheatless receipes, this fireless cooker, the quick breads, etc, which would be pretty sure to be used by them. If you think this is worth while I will send you their addresses and at the same time will send to them a letter saying that they can expect to receive these directly and that I shall expect them to use them in every way possible.

What do you think of the plan?

Yours very truly,