My dear Miss Tarbell:

When you kindly let me see the letters of my brother, Henry D. Lloyd, to you, I did not make complete copies, and had besides a very careless typewriter — for there were the unhappy days before I discovered our Miss Dodd. Could you let me have them again, if it is not too much trouble to hunt them up? The dates were May 6. '02, and April 11 '03, and May 3 '03. He also wrote to you Sept 26 '02 and Nov. 7 '02. As I have decided to make as complete a collection of his letters as possible, I should like to see those too, unless you do not care to send them. I suppose there is nothing biographical in them, and you did not think they contained any material, and were therefore not worth while sending.

If it is perfectly agreeable to you to send them to Miss Dodd to make copies of, I should be very grateful. In that case, let her charge to my account the expense of copying and carriage. Yesterday I received a letter from Miss Stalbaum, "Fraulein," who helped him so much and she said spoke of your "fine and most interesting articles" in the Dec. and Jan'y American, adding "I feel that it is a continuation of the good work H.D.L. began." So say we all yours!

With best wishes for you and your work,

Yours sincerely,

Caro Lloyd Withington
