Dear Mr. Gould:

I have been away from my desk for ten days and find on returning your note of November 22nd with a postscript saying you would like to see my Recollections when they are complete with an eye to the Journal. I suspect that what I am turning out is not exactly your kind of thing. However, from what I have learned about editors you never can tell, so if you wish you shall see the stuff when it is in a shape to travel about.

Thank you for your invitation.

Very sincerely yours

Mr. Bruce Gould
