Dear Mr. Case:

It is good to know that you are back again. I can hardly be said to be back myself for illness in my family is holding me in the country a little more closely than I had planned, however, I think the worst is over and I can go back to work with a freer mind.

I have been getting together a paper on Mr. Young's ideas about training young men for business. It is a little too scrappy I think - needs bracing up at several points. I had a talk with Stewart Crocker which I have embodied in it - very interesting to me. Would you care to look the article over? I should like your suggestions. Perhaps you could add two or three "success stories," the kind of thing that rejoices the heart of The American Magazine! How about it?

I am getting together my material on the Boston period and there are so many things I want to know more about. I would like to know about that first trip to Boston as Mr. Young recalls it. Where he got his money to go. I have suspected but have no evidence that he did some extra work at Canton to eke out the allowance from the family. Is this true?

I want to know more than I do about how he paid his way to Boston University. I have run across several references in the notes to one Goldthwaite. He seems to have been a partner of Mr. Young's. E. A. Adler says in the interview which Mr. Crocker and Miss Russell had with him that he has two letters on stationery marked with the firm name - Y. & G. The note says that he would send photostats of the letters. Was this done and if so, may I see them?

I had understood that Mr. Young published a volume called, "Common Law Pleadings," but in the notes of an interview with Dean H. D. Albers of B. U. I. S. I see that he says that he and Mr. Young were responsible for a pamphlet called, "Practice in Problems of Pleadings" of the 1925-26 publications? And may I see the one of the 1925-26?

I am ordering today a copy of "System" for August. I had not seen the article to which you refer - interesting topic.

Were there any talks at the meeting at Association Island this year that I ought to see? Also, is the copy of the St. Lawrence Address as published in the Times the official copy? If not can you see that I get the complete address. It was mighty good.

I am greatly pleased that you and Josephine want me to come to dinner when that "elusive but not impossible apartment" materializes. I shall look forward to it with real pleasure, but I hope to see you both before that. I shall be back to town the middle of next week with the regular harness on, I expect. As soon as possible after that I would like to talk with you if it is convenient. And do you suppose it would be possible to arrange a talk with Mr. Young on the Boston period? - Informal reminiscences. You know I do not want to badger him and should only want it if he felt like it. I shall go up to Boston probably before very long for a week's work and it would probably be worthwhile to see him before I go if it can be arranged comfortably for him.

Very sincerely yours
