elevating influence
of ladies' society. I know he was made
happy too by adding a little to your
pleasure and comfort.
I would have acknowledged your letter before, but
have been waiting
to announce the arrival of my good husband. He tells me he wishes to do
that himself, so I will leave to him the pleasure of telling you
the particulars of his trip. Tell the young ladies I know

burn. Mr. S. has described each one of you to me, size, features and attractions generally until I feel as if I need no introduction.

My two sisters sail from the 14th Oct. for a six months trip. Would you think them too informal if they should present themselves some day?

With kind regards to the young ladies and yourself.

I remain
Cordially Yours
