My dear Dr. Smith:

Weeks and weeks ago you sent me an interesting letter to which you had no answer. Pray do not think that I did not appreciate your writing. Nobody realized more than I did how superficial the little protest the Herald Tribune article of which you speak was. It was a protest however. While it didn't go very far I think it did not mis-represent the situation. At all events it relieved my mind.

I have read your article giving what you consider an equitable basis for handling the controversy with real interest. From the point of view of a layman, and a very ignorant one at that, you seem to me to have an excellent plan. I shall keep an eye on the future developments and if you should be writing anything in the future I wish you would bring my attention to it.

You ask that I return the Equitable Basis article and it goes to you with this letter, this letter of applogies for my long delay in writing it.

Very sincerely yours
