Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
31 W. 9th Street,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Miss Tarbell:

Herewith find the galley proof of the "Book of Woman's Power" as I am taking it out of town to-night. I am not quite at liberty to cut as much as I shall probably want to, but if there is any article here which you consider distinctly detrimental, I shall be greatly obliged if you will indicate it, and also anything which you think should be added to it, provided the question of copyright permit does not forbid (for lack of time in which to secure it, I suppose.)

You will see that we have made two quotations over your name, and I am greatly afraid that, being so intent upon the introduction when I wrote to you, I forgot to ask your permission to include them. One has been used by the anti-suffragists before; the other is an extract from your "Madame Roland," which I sincerely hope you will let us use. Its implications are delicious, and it is entertaining, for which latter reason it is trebly essential.

I am personally extremely glad that you have consented to write the introduction.

Very truly yours,

J Reed

Do you think you could help us out in one minor detail, by somehow referring to the value of considering English conditions - as such - It might head off criticism of the inclusion of one or two patently British subjects.
