VOLUME XXXI—NUMBER 32.

MEADVILLE, PA., JUNE 18, 1913.

STRONG MESSAGE TO CLASS BY PRESIDENT

"Some Essentials in Character" the Theme—Other Sunday Services.

The ninety-eighth annual commencement began last Sunday morning with the preaching of the baccalaureate sermon by President William H. Crawford in the First Methodist Episcopal Church. A very large congregation, including a great many commencement visitors and alumni, was present. The church was decorated with palms and the music was of the best. The processional at the beginning of the ceremony, which included the Choir, Faculty in academic dress, and Seniors in cap and gown, added much to the dignity of the program. Following the scripture lesson by Dr. Crawford, prayer was offered by Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, '76, of Chicago.

President Crawford took as the subject for his annual sermon, "Some Essentials in Character," and selected as his text, II. Peter 1:15: "To your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge." The sermon was an interesting and eloquent one, Dr. Crawford opening with reference to the fact that the college seal, lost for a great many years, had been restored to former use. After speaking at length on the finding of the seal and its real meaning to the college and explaining the fundamental meaning of the words "faith," "virtue," and "knowledge," he said in part: "Well, these are the words of our great motto, a vital part of our history and our traditions—faith, virtue, knowledge; and they lead on to other words—patience, Godliness, brotherly kindness, love. The words stand for fundamental things in the building of the Christian life. They are words handed down to us from our founders; words which had come to them through long centuries from the early day of the Christian church. But, if I understand the author of the Epistle from which the words are taken, there was no thought exhorting believers to lay hold of these words for their own sake, but rather because of what could be done through them in the establishing of a kingdom. The apostle had in mind strife, battle and desperate struggle.

"What were the conditions among the Christians to whom the Epistle was addressed? They are fully described in the chapter following the one from which the text is taken. First there was a lot of false teaching, described as cunningly devised fables and damnable heresies. Second, there was a frightful amount of covetousness and greed. Not outside the church, but inside the church. Of course, there was a covetousness and greed outside. That was to be expected. But to have it inside! That made made a condition which had to be met and dealt with. Third, there were false notions of liberty. The 'Freedom of the Gospel,' as men liked to call it, was abused. Liberty was taken to mean license. This also was one of the heresies of destruction against which the apostle threw himself with all the enthusiasm of his rugged nature.

"Do we not face these same conditions in our own day? When, in all the centuries were there so many cunningly devised fables as now? Isms oriental and isms of our own make are all about us. Worst of all, the Gospel itself, the pure true Gospel of Jesus Christ, is being attenuated and doled out in weak solution, and all this when the supreme need of men is that they shall know the transforming power of the Gospel. Is there greed and covetousness today? To ask is to answer. Let me quote from a recent investigation. 'The filthy slum, the dark tenement, the unsanitary factory, the long hours of toil, the lack of living wage, the back-breaking labor, the inability to pay necessary doctor bills in time of sickness, the poor and insufficient food, the lack of leisure, the swift approach of old age, the dismal future—these weigh down the hearts and lives of vast multitudes.' Trustee Meeting

New Professors and Instructors for Next Year Announced.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees was held yesterday in the Library. There was a large attendance of the Trustees and the large amount of business necessitated practically an all day session. However, on account of the late time of adjournment, it was impossible to secure a full report of the action of the meeting for this issue. Some of the more important items are given below.

In the matter of filling the places on the faculty, Dr. Ernest Ashton Smith, formerly professor of History, Economics and Sociology, but now of Princeton University, was re-elected to the same position with his former rank in the faculty. Dr. John Henderson Russell was chosen as assistant professor of Economics and Political Science, thus giving to that department two men.

Charles E. Hammett, director of athletics at Northwestern University, was chosen as professor and director of Physical Education and Athletics. Dr. Chester A. Darling, instructor in Biology at Columbia University, will take Dr. Breed's position as professor of Biology and Geology. Dr. Arthur H. Darrop of the University of Denver, is the new instructor in Greek and Latin, and Miss Sabra W. Vought the acting librarian.

The salaries of Dr. Akers and Dr. Snavely were raised to the maximum salary given at the college. Mr. S. S. Swartley and Miss Rowley were granted a leave of absence without salary. The executive committee was authorized to elect instructors in English, French, Mathematics, Chemistry, and Laboratory and Gymnasium assistants.

One of the most interesting things in connection with the meeting was the report of President Crawford for the past twenty years, this year closing his twentieth year as president of Allegheny. It is especially notable in this connection that at the time of his entrance to that position, there were but four professors on the faculty.

The budget for the coming year shows that $65,000 will be required for running expenses, exclusive of the boarding houses.

Mr. Will N. Ridge, '82, the nominee of the alumni for Trustee, was invited to sit at the meeting although not voting. He was elected a Trustee at the close of the meeting.

The board adopted the following recommendations by the president:

That Dr. Guy E. Snavely be granted sabbatic leave during the next college year.

That an assistant foot ball coach be provided as an assistant in the gymnasium.

By resolution of the board the Athletic field on Park avenue extension presented to the college by Mr. Eberhart, was named the Eberhart Athletic Field.

NINE SENIORS CHOSEN FOR PHI BETA KAPPA

F. L. La Bounty, '07, Also Elected—Dr. Babcock's Address.

The annual meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa society, the honorary fraternity which selects members on account of their scholarship, was held in the Oratory of Ford Memorial chapel yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. At this meeting one of the prominent young alumni of Allegheny was voted as a member of this organization in the person of F. L. LaBounty, of the class of 1907. Since his graduation from college Mr. LaBounty has been identified with Alden academy as instructor in English and Greek and now is the head of the department of English in Edinboro Normal school.

Mr. LaBounty is best known in literary circles where his short stories and essays have made quite a reputation. The new member of the Phi Beta Kappa society also holds an A. M. degree from Allegheny college.

The important ceremony of initiating the new members from the Senior class also took place at this meeting. Those who were chosen on account of their high scholastic standing attained during their four year course in college were made members of this honorary society. Five members from the young ladies were chosen, while four from the men were fortunate in being made members of this organization. Miss Elizabeth Lord, Miss Dorothy Sansom, Miss Laura Strickland, Miss Florence Griswold and Miss Beulah Grauel were chosen from the young ladies of the class on acount of their high standing while in college, while Clyde V. Sparling, Owen C. McLean, Harry J. Weiler, and Ernest J. Hall were the newly initiated men. Mr. Wayne Whipple, '77, was also initiated into Phi Beta Kappa at this time.

At the twelfth annual meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa society, held in Ford Memorial Chapel Monday evening, Dr. Kendrick C. Babcock delivered his address, "Sources of Democratic Sentiment." Dr. Babcock, who was formerly connected with the Bureau of Education at Washington, and who is now dean of the College of Liberal Arts at the University of Illinois, opened his address by telling the high standards of Phi Beta Kappa, and high worth which Allegheny College is attaining. His address in part was as follows:

"While analogy is not argument nor is illustration proof, both may serve as useful auxiliaries in any attempt to understand the meaning and working of such subtle forces as those which make our democracy. Neither pure logic nor bare facts, if either can be found in matters in which the human element is so large as it is in government, social organization, industrial progress, and the expression of public opinion, can be relied upon to produce

Flag Presentation

Wayne Whipple, '77, to Present Flag to College at Noon Today.

Probably one of the most interesting ceremonies that has taken place at Allegheny in some time and which will be a fitting climax to the commencement program, is the presentation by Wayne Whipple, '77, of the new United States peace flag, to take place at 12 o'clock in front of Bentley Hall. Hon. Arthur L. Bates, '80, will make the speech at this important ceremony. Although Mr. Whipple is likely better known to Alleghenians on account of his many literary achievements, yet the new flag of the republic is a work which has attracted the attention of the President of the United States as well as the Secretary of State and Secretary of War. The story of the lives of Washington and Lincoln made Mr. Whipple famous in literary circles and when he came to write "The Story of the American Flag" he saw that a new arrangement of the stars would have to be made to adjust its "union" to the growth of the Union. He devised the arrangement so as to have the stars represent the nation's history. In the center of the field he placed thirteen stars in the form of a six-pointed star representing the thirteen original states. Around these is a circle of twenty-five stars which represent the states admitted to the Union during the first hundred years, while outside of this circle are ten stars representing the states admitted since that time.

The manner in which this new design was received in the White House and War and Navy Departments, by all the authorities and experts, was almost as surprising as the reception of the Lincoln books. When Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the union there were just two spaces left in the rows. Members of the joint board from the two departments were in daily communication with Mr. Whipple at Philadelphia. It was decided that, on account of the Presidential compaign just opening, and because the people were not prepared for a radical change in the placing of the stars, that time should be allowed the Nation to become acquainted with the necessity of some change.

This new emblem has been announced through books, magazines, flag calendars, and by unfurling flags with the new arrangement from the Atlantic to the Pacific, both North and South. Everywhere, it is claimed, it has been received with enthusiasm, especially in the Southern States, as "the flag of the father grown up with the country."

It is of especial significance that such an honored alumnus of Allegheny should be present to present to his alma mater one of the new flags of the republic. The merchants of the city have declared a holiday at the time the ceremony is to take place on the campus, while another well known speaker in the person of Hon. Arthur L. Bates, '80, will make the main address.

NINETY-EIGHTH YEAR OF COLLEGE COMPLETED

Seventy-Four Students Receive Degrees—Senior Six Orations.

The niney-eighth annual commencement exercises were held this morning in Ford Memorial chapel. The six speakers, C. V. Sparling, O. C. McLean, Miss Elizabeth Lord, H. J. Wieler, C. A. Eckels, and Miss Edna Yost, chosen by the faculty to represent the class, gave their orations and the degrees were conferred by President Crawford. Dr. Carl presided at the organ. A brief summary of the orations follow:

The oration by Clyde V. Sparling was on the subject, "Our Heritage." It was a plea that more interest and attention be given to the history of Allegheny and to the lives of such men as Timothy Alden, Homer J. Clark, Martin Ruter and others who have done much to build up the college. This the speaker called "reverence for our past," and said that such reverence is the thing that can make college men and women prize more highly their opportunities, their "heritage from the past." This spirit of reverence will spur them on to greater achievements for their alma mater. It is the foundation of the real, genuine "Allegheny spirit." And if allowed full sway, it will also abolish the factions, the cliques and the "politics" which are a blot on our college life at times.

The title of Mr. McLean's oration was "Redeeming the Desert Places." He showed that the educated class has been charged with idle indifference to the problems and needs of society. The best refutation of this charge is to be found in the lives and work of the men who are going out from colleges in ever increasing numbers into social work, willingly devoting their lives to the cause of humanity. No better example of such men can be found than Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, practicing medicine and Christianity on the desolate coast of Labrador.

Favored as we are with the advantages of a college training we owe it to society to strive to better the conditions of those less favored. It may not be in our power to accomplish what Dr. Grenfell has accomplished. We need not even go into definite social or missionary work. But in whatever field of activity we are placed, we can unselfishly follow the humanitarian ideal, carrying others with us in our progress toward perfection.

In "The Spirit of the Class," by Miss Lord, a notable feature of present-day college life was considered. The true class spirit, which implies unselfishness, a general good fellowship, devotion to a common bond, was contrasted with the class-spirit of today in Allegheny, which has taken a place of far too little importance in the life of the college. That existing conditions might be remedied, an appeal was made for a realization of the worth and purpose of class-spirit, and for an ambition to maintain a more efficient class organization by increasing the importance of the class in social life, and by giving to its colors and songs the loyalty which is their due.

An appeal to the Class of 1913 to nurture class-spirit by frequent class letters and class reunions led to the concluding plea, for the maintenance of the standard of the true class-spirit, the standard of unselfishness and democracy.

In his oration on "The Transition of the College," H. J. Wieler treated of the growth and development of the early American College. He showed first under what conditions the early college had been founded and what had been the guiding influence in its inception. He emphasized especially the fact that in the early college the emphasis had been placed upon the development of character in the individual and the creation of strong individuality. He then showed how after a certain period this ideal became overshadowed by the all-entrancing material growth of the college and

What it Means

Another year at Allegheny has passed into history, and another Senior class is just entering the broader field of alumni life. For them the joys and disappointments of college life, its petty politics and its deeper influences, its pleasures and its follies, its work and its gain, all are fast becoming memories.

Commencement cannot but make us realize that soon we, too, shall be mustered into the common work-a-day world. The roseate idealism of college days will be displaced by the necessity of supplying the wants of the inner man. "Bread and Butter" will become the cry, instead of 'Economics, postulations, concepts or history notes."

Yet every graduate owes to Allegheny a deep debt. On this campus, unconsciously perhaps, our characters have been molded for better things. What each of us has gained here no one can take away. In many instancs a full realization of the debt which each individual owes the old school, may not come until the after years.

But, however much we may find fault with certain conditions or take occasional exceptions at certain decisions, sooner or later all must doff their hats to "our Alleghe" and unite in declaring her the best ever among American Almae Matres.

SENIOR FAREWELL TO THE COLLEGE BUILDINGS YESTERDAY

The annual senior farewell to the college buildings was given before the various buildings on yesterday morning. The speakers were as follows:

To Bentley—Miss Clara Hutchinson.
To Hulings—William Dotterrer.
To Wilcox—Ben H. Ball.
To Observatory—Miss Ruth Baldwin.
To Chapel—Miss Irene Beatty.
To Ruter—Seth T. Perley.
To Gymnasium—Louis L. Hawk.
To Cochran—David J. Blasdell.
To Alden—James W. Mates.
To Library—Miss Frances Norton.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

The class day exercises on Monday afternoon were interesting throughout and a large gathering was present around the rustic bridge to hear the speakers. In the various speeches of the afternoon the different phases of college life were touched upon. The speakers were as follows:

Salutatory—Chas. S. Miller.
Poet—Miss Florence Griswold.
Optimist—John D. Van Horn.
Pessimist—Miss Jessie Tomb.
Essayist—Miss Marion Thomas.
Reader—Miss Ruth Baldwin.
Ladder Orator—Leroy L. Peterson.

PHI GAMMA DELTA LAYS CORNER STONE OF HOUSE.

The corner stone laying exercises for the new Phi Gamma Delta house took place on yesterday afternoon before a large audience of interested spectators including a number of the prominent alumni of the fraternity. The leave-taking ceremonies at the old house on Park Avenue were private and included the reading of numerous telegrams from officers of the fraternity and alumni of the local chapter who were unable to be present. Following this ceremony, the Italian band of Meadville led the line of march across the campus to the new property on North Main Street, where the regular corner stone laying exercises began. Dr. E. B. Heckel, '87, the donator of the Heckel prize, was the master of ceremonies in the absence of Hon. Clifford W. Fuller, '86, who was unable to be present at the last moment. The invocation was pronounced by Dr. William H. Crawford, while the formal laying of the corner stone was performed by Mr. W. N. Ridge, '82, the newly elected Trustee of the college. The principal address was delivered by Hon. John J. Henderson, '62, judge of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania. The program follows:

Music by the Italian Band.

Introductory Remarks by the Master of Ceremonies, Brother E. B. Heckel, '87.

Invocation—Dr. William H. Crawford.

Formal Laying of the Corner Stone—Brother Will N. Ridge, Pi, '82.

Address—Hon. John J. Henderson, LL.D., Pi, '62.

Song.

Greetings from the National Fraternity—Hon. Milton W. Shreve, Bucknell, '82.

Greetings from the Pan-Hellenic World—Thomas Hughes, Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

Benediction—Brother A. C. Ellis, D.D., Pi, '78.

FACULTY CHANGES

With the close of the school year Dr. R. S. Breed severs his connection with Allegheny as head of the biological department, which he has held for ten years. The first of July he takes up his position at Geneva, N. Y., as head of the bacteriological department of the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station. This station, independent of any university, and a similar station at Ithaca, N. Y., in connection with Cornell university are the two stations maintained by the state for research work having for its aim the improvement of agriculture throughout the state.

The station at Geneva has six departments, bacteriology, botony, eutomology, chemistry, horticulture, and chemistry of the soil, and Dr. Breed with his associate and two assistants, is to take the place of Dr. Harry A. Harding as head of the department of bacteriology.

The work of this department is to a large extent taken up with the study of milk sanitation—the problem of fixing certain recognized standards of purity of milk so that the producer and consumer will know exactly what grade of milk is being sold and bought and the farmer producing the good milk will get the better price. An important line of investigation in milk bacteria is the study of the efficiency and economy of the milking machine and its relation to the bacteria of the milk. The study of soil bacteria, especially as influenced by the application to the soil of lime and other substances, and the study of soft rot in vegetables, cabbage, cauliflower and turnips, form the basis of still another branch of the work of this department.

He came to Allegheny in 1902 to take charge of this department when the whole biological department was located in Room 8 in Bentley Hall, now the Bible room. From this meagre equipment Dr. Breed has brought the work of the department to a place where it ranks with the first of the departments in college. The work in biology through his efforts is noted among people away from Allegheny as well as at Allegheny for its efficiency and thoroughness.

However the place to which he is to go in New York State is of such a character that it can be considered an honor for Allegheny to send one of her professors to such a position. The high esteem in which he is held by the students not only of his own department but also of the whole school renders his leaving a loss that will be deeply felt. Through his thoroughness in classroom and his geniality to everyone on the campus, he has come to be one of the most popular and best liked members of the faculty.

The opening of the next college year will see many changes in the faculty, an unusual number of changes, and no less than nine of the members who have made up the faculty this year will have left Allegheny.

Dr. G. G. Benjamin, professor of the department of History and Economics, will not return next year. He has not definitely decided as to his work for next year.

Dr. Akers will have his sabbatic leave next year and will spend the time in study abroad. Dr. Cobern, absent this year in Europe on his sabbatic leave, will return to his chair of English Bible and Philosophy.

Dr. Beiler will go to Boston to finish his work for his Doctor of Philosophy degree, and will have a preaching charge near Boston during the year. Prof. Swartley goes to the University of Pennsylvania to take up post graduate work towards the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Prof. Riddle becomes the Professor of French in the University of Southern California. Dr. Dunlap has accepted a position as director of athletics of the university of Syracuse. Miss Beebe will go to China this summer to join her parents.

ALUMNI MEETING.

The annual dinner and meeting of the Alumni Association will be held today at 1 o'clock. The following is the program:

Business session.
Report of Committees.
Organization.

The election for the position of Glee Club leader was held on last Thursday afternoon and resulted in George D. Rose, '15, being chosen leader for the ensuing year. Those men who had participated in at least half of the concerts were eligible to vote. On last Saturday morning the new leader for the Mandolin Club was elected by the members of the club. C. C. Miller, '15, who was the leader of last year's club was again chosen for the ensuing year.

A delightful luncheon was given by Miss Margaret Beebe at the Saegertown Inn on last Saturday in honor of the approaching marriage of Miss Jessie Tiffany, ex-'14, to Clyde L. Nevins, '13, the ceremony to be held this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents on South Park avenue. The guests included members of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. The private dining room of the Inn was artistically decorated in Phi Gam and Alpha Gam colors, while appropriate remembrances were given to those in attendance.

Hon. George Steele, '69, died at his home in West Pittston, Pa., on last Wednesday morning at 11:20 o'clock, after only a short illness of three weeks. Judge Steele was former president judge of Luzerne county common pleas court and had all his life been active in public affairs. He graduated from Allegheny in the class of sixty-nine and later studied law at Columbia university, from where he was admitted to the bar in 1872 in Luzerne county court. In his death Allegheny loses one of her sons who made a successful career in the world and was beloved by many friends.

SENIORS ENTERTAINED BY PRESIDENT CRAWFORD

The entire Senior class was most pleasantly entertained by President Crawford at Cochran Hall for dinner on last Tuesday evening. Almost the entire number of the class was present to enjoy the hospitality of the president and the evening was spent most delightfully. A voting contest was held at the close of the evening to determine some vital questions. Miss Clara Hutchinson and James M. Miller, were voted the most popular, while Miss Eva McKinney and H. R. Hofelt were given the majority of votes for the two best looking persons in the class. Miss Marion Thomas and James M. Miller were decided on as being the best story tellers of the class. L. L. Hawk was given the majority of votes when it came to selecting the man who had done the most for Allegheny during his four years, while Miss Florence Griswold and Miss Elizabeth Lord were tied for the same honor among the girls. The persons who will become most widely known were decided upon as being Miss Florence Griswold and Leroy L. Peterson. Charles B. Winn and Miss Elizabeth Lord were chosen as the two persons for whom the college had done the most, while Miss Edna Yost and H. J. Wieler were voted as the persons of the class whom the members would be most delighted to honor twenty-five years hence. All the voting caused a great deal of amusement among the Seniors and will likely be continued, this being the first time that such an innovation was ever attempted among the members of the graduating class.

PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

President Crawford held the annual reception to the Senior class, their friends and relatives, faculty and alumni, last evening in Cochran hall after the Phi Beta Kappa address in Ford Memorial chapel. The spacious rooms of the commons were artistically decorated with palms and other appropriate decorations. Dr. Crawford, himself, received the guests and had a friendly word and hearty handshake for each and every one. Much of the time was spent in conversation and the relatives of the Seniors meeting each other. In the main reception hall a punch bowl was at the services of all who wished to partake, while in the main dining room light refreshments were served. Throughout the evening the Northwestern orchstra rendered numerous selections. After about two hours the guests departed, most of them having become better acquainted at this reception.

"TRELAWNEY OF THE WELLS" PRESENTED LAST NIGHT.

The Duzer Du Dramatic Club gave the second successful presentation of its play, "Trelawney of the Wells" before a large audience in the Academy of Music last evening. The many visitors and alumni in the city swelled the crowd, so that the attendance of last night was about the same as at the initial performance. The cast was practically the same, only a few minor changes being made. Every member was at his best and in the opinion of those who saw both performances, the one of last night was staged with even greater success than the preceding one. All the leading characters portrayed their parts well, seeming to benefit by the experience of one presentation, while the whole cast did well even to the minor details.

KALDRON APPEARS

The Kaldron for 1913 appeared on Tuesday of last week for the first time and was sold by the manager at the treasurer's office. The book presents a very attractive appearance with a deep blue cover, marked "The Kaldron, 1913," and the inside printed on smooth white paper that gives a splendid background for the cuts. It is dedicated to A. W. Thompson, '97, the vice president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, as "one of Allegheny's sons who has won for her name a place in the world of affairs." The opening pages of the book are taken up with a cut and description, taken from the minutes of the trustee meeting of 1817, of the recently recovered and readopted seal of the college. Following this is an "In Memoriam" and cut of Miss Lucy Crawford, who died last year.

The Kaldron board is composed of Harry J. Weiler, '13, Editor-in-chief; O. C. McLean, '13, C. S. Burwell, '14, P. H. Nichols, '14, Misses Marian Thomas, '13, Florence Griswold, '13, and Elizabeth Lord, '13, as assistant editors. A. R. Edmonds, '14, and E. W. Hickman, '16, art editors, and B. B. ROBINSON, '15, CHOSEN TO CAPTAIN BASEBALL NINE

A meeting for the election of a base ball captain for next year was held in the office of Coach Dunlap last Thursday at noon, and E. A. Robinson, '15, was elected. Robinson was easily the star on the team this year and was the logical man for the position.

Under his captaincy the team that represents Allegheny on the diamond next year will be as good as Allegheny has ever had.

The men eligible to vote at the election were Capt. L. L. Hawk, '13. C. Gilbert, '15, E. Gilbert, '15, Robinson, '15, Rose, '15, Campman, '16, Van Slyke, '16, Richards, '14, Bash, '16, and Manager McNulty, '14.

DR. CARL'S RECITAL

The regular annual commencement organ recital was held in Ford Memorial Chapel on yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Dr. William C. Carl of New York City, who for a number of years past has delighted commencement audiences, was again at the organ and gave a recital that more than delighted the many listeners who had gathered to hear this distinguished musician. Dr. Carl is at the present time director of the Guilmant School of Organ, New York, organist and choirmaster, First Presbyterian Church and over de L'Instruction Publique, France.

Before 4 o'clock the chapel was well filled and a great many of the listeners were forced to stand outside of the building in order to hear the program. For a great many years Dr. Carl has played with great success before his Meadville audiences, especially bringing out the fine qualities of Ford Memorial Chapel's organ. The first part of the program consisted of the works of noted composers, among them being "Allegro Appassionato, Sonata V," by Alexander Guilmant, Dr. Carl's former teacher. In the second part of the program the "Sonata in G minor" by Rene L. Becker, dedicated to Dr. Carl, was rendered with that fineness of touch, as were all of the numbers.

Part 1.

Allegro Appassionato, Sonata V—Alexandre Guilmant.

Pastorale—S. de Lange.

Rustic Dance, Pastoral Suite—Clifford Demarest.

Prelude and Fugue in C minor—Johann Sebastian Bach.

Evensong, new—Easthope Martin.

Concerto, "The Cuckoo and the Nightingale"—G. F. Handel.

Part 2.

Sonata in G minor, new—Rene L. Becker. Dedicated to Dr. Carl.

Praeludium.

Scherzo.

Praeludium, Dialogue—Scherzo.

Andante—Mozart.

Finale from E minor Sonata—F. de la Tombelle.

Cantilene—Pastoral—Alexandre Guillmant.

Siegfried's Funeral March—Richard Wagner. In commemoration of the 100th anniversary of his birth, 1813.

Laus Deo—Theodore Dubois.

STRONG MESSAGE TO CLASS BY PRESIDENT.

share of this must be charged up to covetousness and greed. We need some new impulse which will lead us to change our emphasis from the almighty dollar to the almighty man.

"Do we have false notions of liberty today? Read the newspapers! If one could ever say, 'O Liberty, what crimes have been committed in thy name!' surely that time is now."

President Crawford addressed the members of the Senior class in these words: "I have pointed you to a high ideal this morning. It is not easy to attain. But that does not discourage you. I know you too well to believe that the difficult would dishearten you or dull your endeavor. You do not want the easy task. You covet rather the testing of your strength. And if the task is more than your strength you know the source of greater strength. I do not ask that you attempt the impossible, but I suggest that you take up bravely and courageously whatever work duty calls you to do. It is not for you to estimate beforehand all the possibilities and probabilities of success or failure. You could not do it if you would. If the task, whatever it may be, is God's work for you, that is enough. Look not to the right or the left to seek a way of escape, but go straight forward giving the best there is in you. And when you have reached the limit of your strength, be assured that the unseen Leader, who clothed an ancient apostle with strength, will strengthhen you. It is Babcock's message that I bring to you: 'Pray not for tasks suited to your strength but pray for strength suited to your tasks.'

"But it is too late to give what may smack of advice. If the four years you have been with us have not made known to you the message Allegheny College has for all who come to her, nothing will. Nothing I can say now, solemn though this moment now be, will be of any avail. But you know the message. You know that what Allegheny stands for is not learning or scholarship alone, but character as well—clean, firm, strong, wholesome, Christian character. What is scholarship without character? What is culture? What is intellectual strength? Ah, we must come back to the teaching of the Great Teacher! Here you have the basis of faith! and after faith virtue and knowledge, and all the essentials of character; and with them there stands forth God's man, noblest of all creations and product.

"Your record in college has been honorable. You have finished your work on the hill yonder in such manner as to justify the belief that you are equal to the responsibility which God and the nations are today putting upon men of courage and men of strength. Welcome, then, to the larger field of opportunity, to the heroic task, to the severe testing. May you come forth as gold tried in the fire. God bless you, and God give you daily strength for daily need."

Following the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning the commencement program was resumed by the College Love Feast in Ford Memorial Chapel at 4 o'clock, in charge of Dr. Camden M. Cobern, head of the English Bible department, who has just returned from a trip in the Holy Land. Bishop James M. Thoburn, '56, made the principal address of the afternoon on "Choosing Your Profession." The Bishop spoke with a great deal of earnestness on the subject and good advice to the members of the Senior class.

At the Stone Church in the evening, Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, '76, delivered the annual sermon before the Christian Associations. Dr. Mitchell is at the present time pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church of Chicago, probably one of the largest Protestant churches in that city. Last year Dr. Mitchell delivered one of the college sermons and his sermon Sunday evening was one which was especially fitting to those who are about to go out into the world. After being introduced by J. R. MacGowan, '14, president of the Young Men's Christian Association, Dr. Mitchell chose the text for his sermon from the eighth verse of the 143rd Psalm, "Cause me to know the way wherein I should walk." "No one cares," he said, "to be lost and know he is lost. Each youth should make his chief study the path in which he should walk while here. "Know thyself the aim of the great philosopher, should be our basis in life. Too many young men are misfits; they fail because they are drifting, and above all through lack of will. One must preserve his individuality and find his particular bent in life. He may not do this easily in early life, but no matter how long it takes or how many failures it involves, he just perseveres. Furthermore, to know one's strength gives one the courage to use it with self-confidence and divine self-reliance. Fight your weak spots, for one bad habit will damn you; every one's fundamental business is to build character. Finally, seek a higher standard of success than that of the business standards of today. Take God into your heart and make a life, not a living."

scientific principles or an infalliable and unchangeable procedure, applicable to all conditions and all times. The more subtle and diffused the energy, the more difficulty the scientist experiences in arriving at its source and its operation.

"Three sentiments when merged constitute the fundamentals of democracy in its large application. The first of these is the recognition of the worth of the individual and his right to work out completely the best powers which are in him. This principle does not tend to promote equality among men, but to give full play to superior qualities so that the rate of progress of the whole body, political and social, may be accelerated. The second of these sentiments is that which accords each individual an equal opportunity with every other individual to this evolution of self, under correlation, discipline and understanding of the common good, and grants him also the privilege to express his own judgment of the conditions under which this evolution may take place. The third of the sentiments is that which assures to each person in the commonwealth a full share in the determination of the organization, in the legislation, and administration of that governing instrumentality which is to be common to all such persons.

NINETY-EIGHTH YEAR OF COLLEGE COMPLETED.

how that condition had continued until the present day. He then pointed out the new transition which the college is undergoing and closed with a plea for a return to the old ideal of the early college.

C. A. Eckels treated the problem of child labor in his oration, "The Modern Slavery." He showed the evils of the system where it is in use with little or no restrictions and also the various legislation that has been made in more progressive states, ending with a plea for the elimination of "the modern slavery"—that slavery which deprives the country of its coming citizens.

The subject of Miss Yost's oration is "A Modern Ideal." In it she has taken up the attitude of the American colleges toward the health of their students. The Health Crusade that is being waged in several states at the present time is taken as an example of what can be accompanied in the development of better health for the masses. Although this crusade has college men and women as its leaders, the American college has been lacking in any practical emphasis on this phase of the students' life. The plea of the oration is for athletics, for all instead of for the few, and for some incentive for developing a healthy body while in college. Allegheny was taken as an example of the colleges that do not place enough practical emphasis on good health, and where honors are given to students who choose to develop their intellects at the expense of their bodies.
