Both those who had been there kept

I would not print this for any consideration. I think it would create a more violent storm than broke loose because of the Times editorial. No matter what we would do if given the direct alternative of sparing Germany, or injuring her - an alternative which can only be hypothetical, and therefore should not be discussed now even as a "mere dream" - No matter what we would do if face to face with such an alternative, we don't want people to talk to us now about sparing the smiling fields and cheerful little happy homes of Germany! I know plenty of people who would froth at the mouth over that article. ^{It is true that we} ~~that they are~~ blood-thirsty - but because ^{we} ~~they~~ are ~~would be~~ ^{are} nauseated ^{at least} ~~at~~ talking about the blessed state of Germany compared with the desolation she has made in other countries. ~~They~~ don't want to hear about it.

and Miss Saville turned on her heel and left Duke Hall with a look of indignation & disgust in every line of her face in the presence of October 4, 1918.

I can't see this. I think it's looking too far ahead, to make such statements as these. Besides it's too much like peace propaganda to print a thing like this at the present time.

I don't see it.
It is the propaganda of a peaceful 272

a wonderful piece of writing - propagandist writing:

I hardly know what to say - it leaves me with a whole lot of mixed feelings - chiefly which is the futility of talking about the subject.

If the Germans weren't Germans this peaceful walk to Berlin might have the desired effect, but as they are Germans - the people who stood for the atrocities - who have been militarized out of all human semblance I think they would miss ~~this~~ & the lesson of this "peace" demonstration of free peoples

also I don't think the front-picking of the ~~last~~ line of defense would mean surrender. With their backs to the wall they would fight like hell, fearing retaliation that they know must come.

And no general can vouch for an army - no king for his army. I don't think the wrath of the free people - righteous wrath - could be controlled.

Therefore because I don't think the idea is one that could be worked out - I don't think it a good one to publish
