Dear Miss Tarbell:

One who has spent years in service to humanity has a message that we, a class of college students, need. Our Latin class is just finishing Scicero's "De Senectute" and wish to know what you think of the pleasures of old age. Is old age a time to be dreaded, or is it a time to be looked forward to with pleasure? Is it true that one whose life has been well spent reaps an old age filled with the deepest of joys?

Very sincerely,

(Miss) Florence Smith.
