S. S. McCLURE, Editor

December fourth,

Dear Miss Tarbell:

The contract between me and Mr. Myers is signed and it pleases both of us. I may say that Mr. Myers made it clear to me more than once that he would not think of undertaking the magazine if it were not for the agreement for your Gary article.

I suppose that no person in the world has ever rendered such services to any magazine as you did to McClure's, and again it is you who is rendering a primary service.

The immediate cause of writing you this is the announcement of a book published by Longmans which is entitled "Iron and Steel in the Industrial Revolution" by Thomas Ashton. This is one of the Manchester University publications. I wonder if you would like it?

Faithfully yours,

S. S. McClure
