Safety

Mr. De Blois gave me a personal experience on safety sense.- Watching an engine to which was attached a heavy chain, cross its way the length of a big mill, He saw the chain suddenly fall, drag into the tunnel underneath the track. He knew a man to be working there and expected to see him struck - crushed by the chain. Instead the man ducked, as the engine passed over him, in such a way as to escape injury. How did he know? Was it an instinct that something was wrong and he must look out for himself? Ly
