

March 1, 1932

Dear Mr. Phillips:

I am sorry you are down - bronchial affections are something to look after. I hope Mrs. Phillips will keep you at home until you are entirely well.

It was kind of you to suggest my putting the O.D.Y. Fundamental Library into the book as an Appendix. I had already had the idea, however, which shows how great minds run in the same channel and am trying to get permission to use with the list the introduction which is very good.

As for the speech to the St. Lawrence Graduating Class last year I am using the digest of it that was used in The American, but I think perhaps you are right that the whole thing should be printed in the Appendix, and I will take it up with Macmillans.

What would you think of a collection of O. D. Y's Speeches and Letters - selected of course - he doesn't always hit it by any means, though there is I think always a fresh idea which he tries to get over. Some of the things are admirable. I don't think I would want to edit it, though if Macmillan was favorable I would take it up with the office.

I hope you will get well soon because I want a chance to submit to you the Preface I am trying to hammer out. I want it short of course, but I am having an awful time, so let me know when you come back.

I go to the country Friday but expect now to be back here Sunday or Monday of next week.

Love to the family

Mr. J. S. Phillips
