Editorial

In preparing this, the fifteenth volume of the Kaldron, we have departed in some respects from the established customs of former editors. Heretofore the Kaldron has been a fraternity publication and devoted to a great extent to fraternity interests. The aim of the editors is to make the annual of 1903 a distinctly college publication, and to exclude from its pages no organization which has been recognized by the student body.

We have further endeavored to present to the students and friends of Allegheny an annual that will in all respects represent the true spirit and progress of New Allegheny.

VICTURI, VALETE

(Senior Class Poem)

O it's glorious to live
In a world of life and things,
Where there's duty for the doing
And the happiness it brings.
There's a need of mind and steel
And the energy we feel
Soon can try the muscles of its eager wins.

We have chained our ardent wills
At the doing time of life,
When we would have done with lessons,
And have joined the active strife.
Now before us dawns the day
When like ships we'll slip away
Better fitted by our waiting and delay.

We have touched the lives of sterling men
We never can forget;
There are friends and scenes and sacred haunts
We leave with deep regret.
Through the world's tumultuous roar,
Soon will speak our school dayes o'er,
Echoes from the ling'ring past will reach us yet.

Though it's glorious to stay
In the world of school and books,
As we near the parting day
Life's great field inviting looks.
So to all the magic spell
Of our college days farewell:
Victuri, valeté to the halls of Alleghe.

HISTORY

"All history is biography," wrote Carlyle, and the Class of 1903, realizing this, published the personal records found elsewhere in this volume. To us the records mean that we have served our class and our college to the best of our remarkable ability, but we admit that a different interpretation is possible. To prove our unity and class spirit, therefore, we set down the deeds of our class on which an eminent authority* has bestowed the epithet "greatest."

1903 began its career with a membership unequaled either in quantity or quality by any former class, and the superiority shown here has distinguished us throughout our course. The time-honored banquet of Freshmen was held by 1903 in undisturbed joy. The class rush was a victory for us from the start, although prolonged three days by the Sophomores, who struggled bravely to save their reputations. Even their carefully laid scheme for a Senior-Sophomore banquet became known to us to their sorrow. As Sophomores we were a weighty argument in favor of a two years' college course, for the wisdom and judgment displayed by us at the Freshman rush were worthy of any alumnus in the land. We made only a show of battle in a contest for a diminutive flag raised so high on a greased pole that the Freshmen, themselves, could scarcely distinguish its colors. And if a further proof were necessary, we have it in the undisturbed success of the Senior-Sophomore sleighing party. As Juniors we were busy but modest and, with the mullen leaves in the pipe of peace smoked with the Seniors, was burned every element foreign to Senior perfection.

There was once a dyspeptic who found no supper which would agree with him except one of the richest plum cake; so we have found that we thrive best on the rich diet of respect and honor accorded the "grand old Seniors." We were champions in center-ball, the only contest to which we lent our dignity, but our great success was the Senior-Sophomore sleigh ride to Geneva. By a master stroke of military tactics we transferred the enemy from front to rear, so that instead of blocking our homeward path, they served as rear guards of safety. Numerous social functions have been enjoyed by our class, but none so much as the evening at Hulings Hall; undaunted by the alarm clocks which strangely appeared and sounded at the mystic hour of eleven, 1903 stayed on, waking the echoes of the stately edifice with "sounds of revelry by night."

*President W. H. Crawford, D.D., LL. D. A disinterested but emphatic statement.

And now as we are going out from the old halls, we do not fear being forgotten, for who could forget the class that is first in number, first in wisdom and first in the heart of Alma Mater? For as we go, we hear softly spoken the words:
"And blessings be about you, dear, wherever you may go!"

HISTORY

The Junior Class has been called a small class. Numerically, this is true; otherwise—well, that's our history. "We were born to grow, not stop." Knowledge begins in wonder. At the opening of the present year, ours was the wonder of the entire college. Other students were heard to say, and Dr. Crawford was informed last Christmas in Rome that the present Junior Class could not keep the fast pace with which they had started. Our President cabled us to go slowly, yet no sooner had his message been sent than he learned of our noble and daring pursuit of the Sophomores and Seniors at Geneva and the devastation which followed. Again the cable flashed back the memorable words: "Do beg those Juniors to have mercy or I will have no graduating class this year; and tell them, too, that I believe they can keep the pace which they have started." We have not been disobedient to his hopes. Our entire history in athletics, in the social circle, and in the class room is expressed in the one word, a new word among the others—progress. Progress, a Junior's distinctive mark alone, not Senior's and not Sophomore's, they are, '05 is, Freshmen partly are and they all hope to be Juniors.

Dr. Crawford, at his recent reception in New York, was heard to say: "Our record at Old Allegheny this year has been one of progress." To this an alumnus replied: "I thought that was a word attributed to your Junior Class alone." Doctor quietly remarked: "What is the difference?" Allegheny and the Junior Class have been one in all things which have made them the gem of all the ocean during the year now closing.

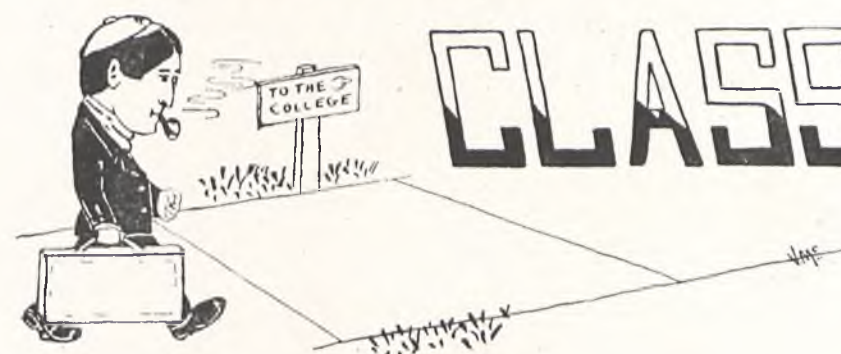

Ruthlessly have we ridded ourselves of Seniors who sat with us for awhile; disdainfully have we spurned all under-class men whom the registrar tried to force on us. Nothing has been too hard for this, our mighty class. Our leaven has passed on to the rest of the lump, placing within them renewed hope of making a successful course and showing them how to attain to Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORY

The history of the class of '05 begins in the fall of 1901, at which time that body of students entered the college. They were green to be sure, but the greenness was only the first stages of that which was to grow and mature into the well-rounded and developed college man.

The first outbreak, which resulted in a glorious victory for the Class of '05, was the cane rush between the Sophomores and the Freshman classes. It came about in this way: A challenge was formulated and formally presented to the Sophomore class challenging them to a rush to prove to the college that the Class of '05 had rights and honors which they could protect. The eventful day arrived and ended with defeat and disaster to the Sophomore class. But the trouble was not to stop here. One of the wise and daring Sophs attempted to take, through his superior bulk and head, a cane honorably won and carried by one of the Class of '05. The class taking this as an insult dealt with the miscreant accordingly and after rolling him in the street he promised to be better. This served as a warning to all those who doubted the gallantry and knighthood of the Class of '05.

During the winter term the Class of '04, the Sophomore Class, tried banqueting on the quiet, but the Freshmen were also guests, and by their presence more jest and interest were added to the occasion. But the crowning feature of the first year of the Freshman Class was the winning of the Farson Oratorical Contest by one of the members. The winner of the contest represented the College in Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest and, through his ability, brought honor to his class and College.

The next year this class became the worthy and wise Sophomore, with all the attending faults of a child, which has had nothing but success and glory all through its young life.

Nevertheless, when the younger generation, the Class of '06, undertook to display its prowess by challenging the Sophomore Class to defend its honor there was the beginning of their fall, for on the day of the battle the Freshment faded before the rush of the invincible Sophs like night before the coming day, and still the glory and honor of '05 was intact.

In athletics the Sophomore Class contributed more than her share, having stars on all the college teams.

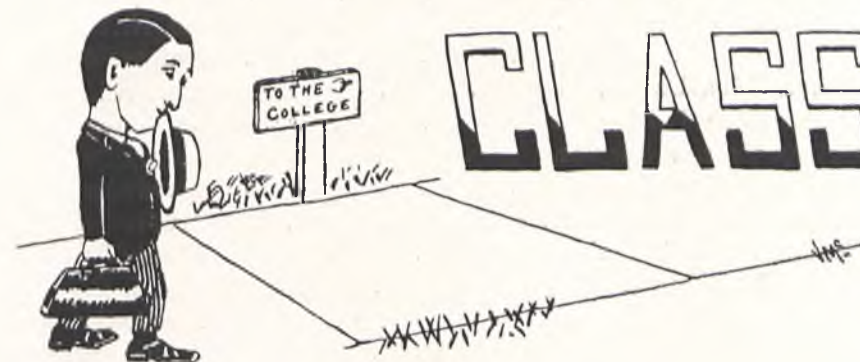

By far the greatest event in the Sophomore history was the unique Senior and Sophomore banquet which was held in a neighboring town. A very enjoyable evening was spent around the festal board, but on our way home a few Juniors, Freshmen and more Preps appeared with the thought of putting to flight two classes that have never lowered their colors. In a short time Freshmen and Preps were dumped in the snow and the Juniors were fleeing, and the Classes of '03 and '05 entered town with flying colors and none the worse for the encounter.

HISTORY

A history of '06. Oh, Sophomores, if you might write it! If you could only have your say! But calm yourselves, here is a time when loud noises and boasting don't count. A Freshman has the task.

Where shall I begin? Where did we come from, and how in the world did we ever get here all together? We haven't solved these mysteries. Since that first week has anyone ever seen us all together? Now, that cane rush. We ought to have won it. There were enough of us and quite a number were football men. But I forget; only the Sophs were allowed to use football men. Well they used them. A Junior was their mainstay, and, incidentally, we lost the rush.

But what they gained by their might they didn't have brains enough to keep. Why, actually, a Freshman with very little effort got the cane from them, and with much less effort has been able to keep it.

But then, where we lack in strength and brag we exceed in brain power. The Washington's Birthday party made it clear to the Sophs that they can't come up to us in that. The white heads, dear Sophs, are not what count, but what is in them.

And, after all, these are the days when disputes are not settled and victories not won by mere strength of arms, but by brains. Ask any of the professors and they will tell you that "We star in Mathematics, French is a joy,

Latin to us is play, English's a recreation, without alloy.
German we can display.
You won the cane rush, Sophies,
You play the ball;
But you'll need to take great pains,
You'll have to strive to come forth alive
When you're up against a class with brains."

Teutonic Banquet

New Budd House, Friday Evening, April 24, 1903

TOAST LIST

- Toastmaster, ... B. Frank Williamson
"Though we eat little flesh and drink no wine,
Yet let's be merry; we'll have tea and toast;
Custards for supper, and an endless host
Of syllabubs and jellies and mince pies,
And other such lady-like luxuries."
- The College Man's Club, ... C. G. Farr
'Heaven sends us good meat, but the devil sends us cooks.'
- Song, ... Teutonic Quartette
- Books, Brains and Bentley, ... W. H. Franklin
"Up! Up! My friend, quit your books
Or surely you'll grow double;
Up! Up! My friend, and cheer your looks;
Why all this toil and trouble?"
- Hash, ... C. W. Gill
"I sing the sweets I know, the charms I feel,
My morning incense, and my evening meal,
The sweets of hasty pudding."
- Violin Solo, ... H. M. Scott
- Allegheny's Dynamo, ... J. H. Anderson
"A fiery chariot, borne on buoyant pinions,
Sweeps near me now! I soon shall ready be
To pierce the others high unknown dominions,
To reach new spheres of high activity."
- Toescopia, ... A. C. Saxman
"She is pretty to walk with
And witty to talk with,
And pleasant, too, to think on."
- Song, ... Teutonic Quartette

Beacon Lights of History

Colleges, like potatoes, sometimes have an off-year, as the present Junior class, the result of the heaviest June frost in years, will bear evidence. College history will record 1904 as Allegheny's off-year. A glance at the class roll is interesting:

Arthur Bates Benn is an awfully nice boy. He goes to classes regularly and is a member in good standing in the Allegheny Literary Society, where he makes many excellent addresses on political subjects. A glance at his name will prove that he will some day sit in Congress.

N. B.—We are forced to say all the good we know of Benn because we have heard how he treated last year's editor, threatening him with violence and strong language. We promised then to retract last year's statement, so here goes: "Benn, by the neglect of his daily ablutions does not acquire real estate."

Sarah Louise Breene, of Corry, has been persecuted so long by the attentions of Gaston that we have not the heart to dig up anything further against her. Her classic features and independent spirit are in striking contrast to her Hayzy surroundings. They do say that she swore never to join the Athletic Association because of the impurity in local politics, but conscience and sentiment split the difference and the tellers laid aside a ballot that was marked for but one man.

One beautiful day in the fall of 1900, a pale-faced boy with a recent hair-cut, the gait of a side-wheeler and no style whatever, rambled across the campus toward Bentley Hall. The door of the Mathematics class room was open, and as he walked by, a hand was playfully thrust forth and grabbed him. "(H)ear at last" was all he said, but the style of humor of the two was so similar that they exchanged plugs and were friends forever. Thus Conover landed on our classic campus with a Yankee's humor and a Southerner's appetite for tobacco, and the free and easy gait of a mudskow.

Malcolm Dewey, despite the early disadvantages of association with Dull and Davenport, has maintained his reputation for three years, a fact in itself sufficient to make any man famous. We do not hold your lack of heft or shortness of stature against you, but you must admit that it is a poor advertisement for the Dewey method. (For the benefit of the unenlightened reader, we will say that this is a system of diet, testimonials for which are given in the inverse order of "After and Before Taking.") Something tells us, Malcolm, that you will be an easy one for some old girlic, and a call at your home ten years from now would find you a hen-pecked hubby nursing the baby while wifey, who eats no breakfast, will be lecturing before the woman's club.

Bessie May Dutton, despite the fearful handicap of her father's reputation, has done remarkably well and there are those that are even willing to forget that our crabbed old Math teacher is her father. Bessie enjoys one distinction. She is the only student registered who didn't get her picture in the Kaldron. Her fraternity sisters were all real angry with her and some of them even went so far as to tell her, which cut no ice with Bessie. Your sunshiny manners are in striking contrast with the constant grouch of your father.

Daisy Estelle Foster. It is a relief to come to a name against the owner of which you know nothing. It is a pleasure to find someone in the college that doesn't meddle in other people's business even if they have none of their own.

Blanche Rose Garver is a brilliant girl. Brilliancy is shown in every feature. It darts from her big black eyes; it is reflected from her raven-black hair; it scintillates from her lovely red waist and by a peck or two of jewelry scattered promiscuously over her person, she is rendered as brilliant as a fire in a furniture factory. Her great popularity with the men has caused the girls to be more or less envious and some of the latter are unkind enough to refer to her as Miss Butinski.

Arthur Harold Gaston received his early mental discipline in a brick-yard and now, after spending five years in Allegheny, we find him developed into a full-blown intellectual vacuum.

His voice is the loudest at Delta Tau's council board. At an ordinary conversational pitch, it would be the loudest at an Elks' carnival and would sound high above the hurdy-gurdy. In fact, not only is the Delt council bored, but everybody is bored when Harold starts off with his "By God! Fellows." But you deserve credit for one thing Harold. You are the only man in college that is able to talk day in and day out, conservatively, yet forcibly, never repeating, yet never failing to do justice to your one subject—Doc. Wells and his Chemistry II. Your opinion of him, Gaston, is a masterpiece. It is a monologue sung continuously during nine months' time, worded in the choicest and hottest of English. As a word picture it is a masterpiece and your literary fame will rest upon it.

Edgar Alfred Griffith is the antithesis of John McKinstry Griffith. The Thetes initiated him in the hope that his quiet nature and bread-and-milk disposition would balance the over-strenuousness of the other Griff. He has the appearance of a chap who is dreadfully bored when, in reality, he is only trying to appear interested. His general appearance would indicate that he would be an easy mark for insurance agents, aluminum representatives and confidence men.

Roy Watson Hazen is the last spasm of the Phi Gam cholic which began with the introduction of the Eatons, and was further augmented by the initiation of Blaisdell, Sleaze, Whitehill and Barclay. The constant appearance of this type shows that the millenium is yet a long way off. You have done your best to uphold the Phi Gamm reputation of "gittin' there" in politics, but up to date you have failed to land. The mighty crown of fraternity leadership has never touched your 6 $\frac{7}{8}$ head, but seems to rest uncomfortable on your shoulders instead.

Mary Frick Jones, despite the fact that she comes from West Virginia, is all right and everybody is for her. The appearance of yourself and one or two others has done much to dispel our first impression of that state given us by such oddities as Anderson, Stallings, King, etc.

Blaine Kincaid entered college life under three great handicaps. Besides coming from Corry, he was preceded by a brother with the reputation of a politician and carries the added weight of a great man's name. He considers himself too good for the non-fraternity clubs, his absence from their picture being explained by his statement, "I wouldn't associate with that bunch of cheap skates." The Fraternites at the same time shouted in chorus, "We wouldn't allow that yellow-livered skunk to empty our garbage cans." Thirteen is his hoodoo number, because thirteen girls have put the casters under him and he has voted on the losing side in thirteen elections.

Homer Earnest Lewis. Any man that has the nerve to wear those villainous French whiskers and to enter college after he is married might even dare to take exception to what the Kaldron says about him. We can never take you seriously, however, because away back in our childhood days, before the Elsie books had been displaced in our favor by George Ade, we were taught to believe that a Sunday school superintendent, wearing exactly that kind of whiskers, was the "noblest work of God." You always remind us of those blissful days of childish ignorance.

Helen Elizabeth McClintock, we are afraid that you are paired off with a couple of dead ones. We have just expressed ourselves in regard to Kincaid, and as for Trosh, he comes further along in the class roll. In many other classes you would pass without notice, but in your present surroundings you shine brightly indeed. Your ability to laugh leads to the remark that it would be a grand opening for a humorous husband.

Harry Beeson Mansell was intended for a hero, but was accidentally given the wrong head and body. He has held the center of the stage successfully in the court room, on the football field, on the cinder path, in class fights, in psychology, and as a prize fighter, the last of which but few know little about. For a time we considered you a little loose upstairs, but when you returned last fall with a new accent, "de'a," "he'ah", "professah", etc., we no longer thought it we knew it to be a certainty. You are one-half pound lighter and one-half inch shorter than "Skin" Taylor. The difference is in the head.

Richard Nye Merrill, who, with Blaisdell and Craig, formed a trio of the rottenest politicians ever gathered together, finding that he could not make enough money drumming up trade for the Star, decided to enter the ministry, and forthwith was given a charge. Not being Methodists, we do not know what a meant by a charge, but it is an even bet than in the encounter Dick will get none the worst of the onslaught. He has looked soft on one girl so long that his face has assumed the "beloved disciple" expression which will be of great service in holding down a Methodist pulpit at $30 per.

J. Gayle Nelson, poet, art critic, editor, diplomat, self-booster and wet-blanket. His present condition was brought about by his sudden rise from the humblest of the non-frats to the high Muck-a-Muck of the Phi Psi fraternity in a little less than a year. His chances of fame rest upon his celebrated poem entitled, "Glist of the Wind King," the latter part of the title being an allusion to himself and his celebrated sentences, "East will enter Allegheny" and "Thompson may be officially connected with this college next year."

Mary Roberts, by some means or other, always has a fellow or two on her staff. They don't stay long; they either graduate, leave school or else leave Mary. Whereupon she picks up another and by her skillful training, at the end of a few weeks he is able to graduate, a full-fledged college lover, and can talk low to any girl he meets. Her favorite kind is the species known as the "Lady Escort," or "Gentleman Wrap-holder." The influx of a dozen or more children to the Phi Gams has made that fraternity very popular with Mary, with whom the following dialogue is often rehearsed:

"Mary! Mary! Light and airy, what will we do with our preps?"

"Send them to me and presently, I'll return them all social adepts."

Roy Foster Shepherd is one of the two pluggers that have thus far entered the C. E. course at Allegheny. The other is Sporr. Until he was chosen by the Non-Frat. organization as the yearly sacrifice, his presence was unknown, and even yet his existence is doubted by the majority of the students.

Charles Levens Smith, handsome, fat, genial, energetic and studious, is an apparent departure from the accepted mediocrity of a Smith. However, add up and divide by two these qualities with those possessed by Brother Freddie, who is neither fat, handsome nor scholarly, and who withal is as grouchy as a bear and as thin as a Huling's Hall pie, and you have the average commonality of a typical Smith. The one romance of his life, like Guinevere of old, is doing penance in a boarding-school convent at Philadelphia, while Charlie, the modern Launcelot, locks himself up in the quiet of the Sig monastery.

Albert Snearline is a resident of Meadville, but Meadville can't help it. He was born here (although the town might have got out an injunction against it.) How Meadville wishes he had been born at Geneva or Coon's Corners! If he had, Meadville would still be laughing at the ill-fated town that would be forced to claim him as an output. Although the joke is on Meadville, she still has hopes, for in another year he will graduate and Dr. Crawford, who provides work for all his graduates, will get him a nice position with a lucrative salary—he hopes. Meadville hopes it will be out of town.

Frederick and Herbert John Stockton are brothers who live in Vallonia. One is going to be a Baptist preacher and the other a Delt. When they make an address to the students some few years hence they will tell how hard they worked to get through college and how much other people ought to appreciate their snap, etc. (We have all heard that kind of a speech.) In their case it is no fairy tale. If you don't believe it, just take an afternoon off some time, walk northwest until you fall from exhaustion, and then when some farmer picks you up and tells you that it is not far, only about two miles out the pike, you will believe that the Stocktons are working hard to get through college. We write with feeling in this case for we were once there.

James Glen Street, not satisfied with the ignominy of coming from Corry, is often seen in company with Kincaid. Of late Street has been attempting to talk to the girls and even—but Pshaw, he has no shame; he likes Kincaid. Let us forget his name and on to the next.

Frederick Wineman Strickler, better known as Straight-Front Mary, is a good-natured grouch, who is continually trying to choose between a "boost" and a "knock", with the result that he can only swear to relieve his feelings. Mary is the star performer on the State College troupe which is distinguished by the absence of collars and neckties on all occasions. He was, unfortunately, jilted by a girl shortly after arriving at Allegheny, which did not add any sunshine to his disposition, but contributed largely to his fund of adjectives. To see him at his best, go to the race track when he practices high jumping. His grasshopper stride and his opinion of the stick that he tries to jump over are both interesting.

Harry Allen Turner, of West Hickory, is a conglomeration of contradictions. He is an athlete and the girls say he is handsome. Although handsome, he does not like the girls and to complete the tangle of his traits of character, he never talks. Surely a silent, handsome athlete who does not like the girls is a rarity and his case should be investigated. Turner has one ambition that has been burning in his breast for two years. It is to express, in suitable English, his opinion of Prof. Horton who flunked him in Latin. Although this seems but a small thing, as most of us could do it in very few words, yet it must be remembered that Harry pauses long over his sentences and he is waiting for inspiration before attempting this mighty task.

If Hulings Hall were to be represented by a football team, the unanimous choice for quarter-back would fall to the lot of Louise Winifred Terry. Short, stout, with weight well centered and a quickness of thought and action, which are the essential requirements of a quarter-back, and in these qualities she stands supreme. Nature, in making her a woman, robbed Allegheny of a sensational athlete, but to compensate us for our loss, she gave Miss Terry a handsome face, a clear head, a sunshiny disposition, a dignified manner and a ready pen, all of which makes us forget our loss and rejoice that,

"Heaven made her what she is
And ne'er made sic anither."

Ruth Thomas, known as Miss Thomas, the good, to distinguish her from Miss Thomas from Conneaut Lake, is a type of woman rapidly disappearing. Earnest, sincere and pious, she believes all she reads in the Sunday school books and accepts as the truth all that visiting Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. secretaries tell her. When a bishop or some other kind of a worn-out Methodist preacher makes a speech in chapel, she makes a mental note of what they advise and resolves to follow their example. Some day she will be a great missionary, and in the meantime, as a preparation, she takes exercise in the gymnasium, so that she will be able to give the heathen a run for his breakfast.

Poor Walter Scott Trosh. He has been crossed in love, or rather two girls in attempting to cross his path of love collided and the wreck has piled itself upon Walter's heart. He is too pious, (or thinks he is) to be fickle, yet while his first love pines away for him in a convent of a woman's college in Baltimore, Walter whispers his awful jokes to the fair Helen. Slosh, as he is affectionately called by his friends, is a future great man in the church look-out. At present he has but two sermons, and consequently never preaches more than twice in the same town. His biggest gun is called "Daniel" and in this sermon he growls and looks fierce, admonishing his congregation to be true like Daniel, no matter how far separated they may be from the object of their affections. The sermon concluded, he rushes home, dictates a letter to Baltimore and calls up Helen to make a date.

Warren Ferde Wilcox lost the respect of the student body by refusing to cut classes, and so far is he from being ashamed of it that he announced in the Campus that he had gone three years without a skip. This is enough for the ordinary person to know, but to further expose him, we will tell of his ambition. It is to be a journalist. There were but six people contributed material during the months that the Campus' pages were open for contribution, and as he was one of the six he was chosen as sixth man. Nelson deserves the respect of the student body for the manner in which he has squelched what he has contributed since that time

"Who filled the air with barbarous discordance?"—Claude King.

Pan, Pan, Pan, Pan-Hellenic Pan,
Little Jessie Williams always has a man.
First came Dickie Merrill, diplomatic Thete.
Phi Gamm Billie Secrist quickly met his fate.
Alas for Billie Ward, handsome stately Sig,
His fate was like to Davenport's, a Delt, a snob, a prig.
Craig, the handsome Phi Psi, claims her senior year
And so for the fraternities she always leads the cheer.
Pan, Pan, Pan, Pan-Hellenic Pan,
I am Jessie Williams, always with a man.

The following letter came into the hands of the editor in a very interesting way. For further information see Literary Committee.

Meadville, Pa., Feb. 18.

Dear E—:

They say that I am fickle and that my affections are misdirected. But we know, don't we E— dear? After what I told you to-night, we can both say, "We know." E—, when you close that left eye and turn your head at an angle of 13 degrees, then it is that you have your Sammie walking sideways. And that hair, E— dear, is not ill tempered red, but passionate auburn. Yes, E—, it is you that holds the heart of Sammie in thrall. Then, good-bye, dearest, and ever consider me as I asked you to do to-night.

Yours affectionately,

Sammie.

The Fate of the To-What Club

Roy Mook came up to heaven's gate,
He rang the electric bell;
An angel through the keyhole said:
"A wicked life you've surely led,
Your place is down in hell."

Then Lampe loafed up to the gate
And said he'd like to dwell
In the Presbyterian Reservation;
But the angel said: "Your lot's damnation
To a right hot spot in hell."

Next Andy Williams came along,
A sporty lad and swell;
He tried to bluff his way clear through,
But the angel said: "There is for you
A place prepared in hell."

Then up came Phi Gam Kelly,
He's better known as "Kell";
He struck a match on the pearly gate,
Lit his pipe and heard his fate:
"You must go and smoke in hell."

Then last a lean and lanky lad,
George Davenport, downward fell
From head to foot of the golden stair,
With a breaking of bones and a singeing of hair
To the hottest place in hell.

A bunch of fair and fuzzy hair,
A slightly pointed nose;
His strident voice makes lots of noise
And never gets repose.
—H. L. Smith.

A Study in Color

A Theisticized Prayer

A member of the class in Theism attempts to say the Lord's Prayer with the following result:

Our world-ground inherent in the phenomenal productivity of the universe, with due regard to ontological conceptions and anthropomorphic errors let thy name be apostacised. May dynamic interaction continue, and epistemological reasoning be based on no false potentializing of the actual in the immediate sphere in which our being is coexistent.

If bread exists except as a subjective phenomenon, and preconceived ideas as to causality are not mere verbal implications, give it to us daily. Forgive us our relations to co-existing phenomena not in accordance with the relation and correlation of facts whose various similitudes we state as law—but which really does not exist.

Lead us not into superficial syllogisms, but deliver us from Bowne. For thine is the inherent and superixistent sway, and the category known as glory until inconceivable and unimaginal but thinkable eternity—Amen.

Miss Gailey: "Harry, we had onions for supper at the Hall tonight. See how close you can get without detecting them."

Talkee

In English room day in, day out,
Doc. Lockwood talkee, talkee;
But what his words are all about,
Well, ask our Doc-ee Lockee.

Of French and love the whole year long
Doc. Bynum talkee, talkee.
Methinks they're nearer right than wrong
Who Bynum mockee, mockee.

Within the walls of number four
Doc. Smith he talkee, talkee;
While students yawn and sleep and snore,
Or curse the clockee, clockee.

With snappy tongue and fiery eye
Doc. Bill, he talkee, talkee;
We squirm, we groan, we heave a sigh,
We fain would knockee, knockee.

No study in Doc. Monty's class,
Just jokes and talkee, talkee;
And so we, every lad and lass,
To Wilcox flockee, flockee.

Against the ills of strolling 'round
Does Prexie talkee, talkee;
But, spite of all, the bliss we've found
Of a co-ed walkee, walkee.

Affirmative: Franklin, "Co-education is a disgusting, sickening failure. Look at the Senior class; that proves it."

Negative: Croxall, "Co-education is a blessing and stimulus to rivalry. What would Allegheny be without Hulings Hall? A creature without a heart."

A Hint to Discipline Committee

The New Conservatory of Music

The latest building to be added to our Campus is the Conservatory of Music and it is the gift of anonymous donors. The ground was broken and the building was erected one night during the Spring term and its appearance was hailed with delight by all the new students as filling a long-felt want on the Campus.

The Conservatory has two endowed chairs besides a lesser one, none of which have yet been filled, although Dr. H. Edward Wells is the most likely candidate. Mr. Charles E. Kearney, who did much excellent work with the Glee Club, will manage the institution, and Dr. Crawford will secure students for it.

The erection of the Conservatory will, perhaps, injure the Meadville Conservatory as their aims are so nearly alike. The withdrawal of Dr. Crawford from the patronage of the latter institution will also work against it as he has in the past forced many students to attend. Dr. Crawford announced recently that the Glee Club would be taken from Manville's Studio to the new Conservatory next year.

Ethics

Life's transient joys are all in vain,
There is no favored spot;
Shall peace to me return again
If Ethics must be got?

Of duty good and virtue rare
I ne'er shall wish to hear;
Their very names I cannot bear,
Their knowledge costs me dear.

'Twere better far to yield the ghost
And with the angels sing
Than in the Ethics class to roast
And not know anything.

Poor sinner turn while yet you may
This awful study spurn,
And ditches dig till you are gray,
But never Ethics learn.

Who are these wretches pale and wan
With faces earthward bent,
Who rise and work at early dawn
From sleepless hours spent?

Ah, these are they who can believe
They have a glimmering ray,
And may a passing mark receive
Examination day.

But who are these within the class
Who early seek their bunk,
And tell the stuff to go to grass?
Ah, these are they that flunk.

Farewell ye halls of learning great,
How can I from thee part?
'Twas Ethics caused my ruined state,
'Twas Ethics broke my heart.

Phi Beta Kappa

First New Student: "What were the fellows talking about at the club to-day—that honorary affair?"

Second New Student: "Oh ! that's what they call Phi Beta Kappa, and a degree that they give to the Seniors."

F. N. S.: "For good work I suppose?"

S. N. S.: "No, I don't think so from what Giblyn said. It's something like that my brother went into at the bike meet last summer. On the last day they got together the fellows that hadn't won anything, and made them race for what they called a consolation stake. It's like this: When a fellow can't play football or basketball or do anything else, and when he doesn't get a job in the library or book-store, or get his tuition free, in order to keep him from getting sore on the whole institution, and in order to get him to root for the college when he gets out, they give him that honor so that the people who don't know will think that he was the whole show."

"Tis said that all the larger Kats
Have smaller Kats to scratch 'em
And these in turn have lesser Kats
And so on ad infinitum."

Kommen sie schnell, Miss Maude,
Mein Kopf does ache and I feel quite ill;
Kommen Sie schnell, Miss Maude,
Bringen Sie brandy and a quinine pill.
Und denn, Miss Maude, if it's not too much.
Please zu horen meine Klasse in Dutch.

A pair in a hammock
Attempting to kiss!
In less than a moment
They looked just like this!

Allegheny Alphabet

A stands for Alleghe, little but great;
She's our dear Alma Mater, and early and late
We'll sing of our Alleghe.

B is for Bynum, slow, learned and fat;
The good-natured fellow will marry a Kat—
Then woe to Doc. Bynum.

C is for Co-ed, so dainty and neat,
She's a pert little flirt, but she's pretty and sweet.
We all love the Co-ed.

D is for Dutton, rheumatic old bloke;
He will twist you an ear, or crack you a joke—
Big-hearted old Dutton.

E is for Elliott, our hard-working Bill,
He's a merciless, rigorous beggar, but still
We've a friend in Doc. Elliott.

F is for Flunkers, the recordless set,
They'll ne'er make a mark in the world, you can bet—
The lazy old flunkers.

G is for Grind, the other extreme,
Cares only for books and for marks it would seem—
Unsociable grind.

H for Hamnett, that antiquitous creature,
His mother was Eve; you may guess what a feature
Is Doctor Hamnett.

I is for Infants, or Preps you may call 'em,
Who talk on all subjects, who look wise and solemn—
The Ignorant Infants.

J is for Jolly, no Prof. is quite proof
'Gainst the masterly art, if you give him enough.
Then learn how to jolly.

K is for Knudson, quite a saint in his way,
With a conscience too tender for Old Alleghe.
Pray for poor Knudson.

L is for Lockwood, without humor or wit;
He would like to be liked, but he can't make a hit.
We're sorry for Lockwood.

M is for Monty, the joking old clown;
He hasn't an enemy in college or town.
We're all in on Monty.

N is for Nihil ex nihil fit;
This is our thought as in class-room we sit
And listen to nihil.

O is for Orators prancing around,
With not much oration, but a great deal of sound—
The air-pawing orators.

P stands for Prexie, the boss of the show,
A clean-shaven fellow, full of bluster and blow;
But we'll root for old Prexie.

Q is for Quill Club, a reticent body,
That chatters of letters while stirring its toddy.
Get into the Quill Club.

R is for Ross; he's a father of late,
But the babe is as big as his pap—Sorry state!
Poor diminutive Ross.

S is for Smith; there are some things he knows,
But he often provokingly pokes in his nose
Where we want no Doc. Smith.

T is for Tests, that despised institution;
They recur every month, and there's no absolution—
Those pesky old tests.

U for Ungodly, those reckless young men
With Williams and Lampe ahead of the train;
Ah me, how ungodly.

V is for Voices, the Glee Club we mean;
They yelp and they yawl, they screech and they scream—
The risp-rasping voices.

W is for Wells, of conceit he is full.
In his treatment of students he is otherwise fool—
Most unpopular Wells.

X for Exams, O cease the retention
Of that blankety, blankety, blank invention—
A curse on exams.

Y is for Yearbook, full of roasts, scalds and jokes
On students and profs and lots other folks—
The blistering yearbook.

Z is for Zero; too oft to our shame
That little, round, laughing mark stands by our name.
O spare us, thou Zero!

Take a girl to the next Glee Club Concert. It will save turning around to throw your coy glances.—Dr. Wells.

But why should his spirit be proud
His boast is in brawn, not brain.
He bats and hurls the leather sphere
In a way that brings him fame.
He can't compute the curves he makes,
But he gets there just the same.
—Turner.

TWO CONDITIONS WITH BUT ONE RESULT

CHASE

A FACE

A VERY BAD CASE

To Whom It May Concern:—

It gives me great pleasure to recommend to prospective housekeepers aluminum cooking utensils. My youngest daughter, who has had several years' experience with the wear, and who says there is no wear out to it, has pending now a deal by which she may require about 170 pounds of the metal. It is very light, especially about the top; has a shape that would suit the most fastidious; unlike granite is not easily checked; is but slightly alloyed; requires little stirring, and will stay hot longer than any other vessel in the house; does not smoke and is free from all unpleasant odors; there are few joints and therefore does not leak easily, and does not discolor unless subjected to intense heat. There is positively no Trash about it.

Mrs. McClintock.

Ten Little Senior Boys

Ten little Senior boys went out to dine;
Smith choked his little self, and then there were nine.

Nine little Senior boys sat up very late;
Squier overslept himself, and then there were eight.

Eight little Senior boys traveling toward heaven;
Kearney said he'd stay there, and then there were seven.

Seven little Seniors boys doing funny tricks;
Williams lost his nerve, and then there were six.

Six little Senior boys went out for a drive;
The Juniors took Anderson, and then there were five.

Five little Senior boys studying Bible-lore;
Freeman became a minister, then there were four.

Four little Senior boys on a jubilee;
Taylor bluffed out, and then there were three.

Three little Senior boys went to see the zoo;
Davenport got captured, and then there were two.

Two little Senior boys playing with a gun;
Harris got shot, and then there was one.

One little Senior boy living all alone;
Craig got married, then there were none.

Anderson: "Well you know that we learn in Ethics that good sometimes comes of evil."

Bain: "The only good that can come of you would be to turn you into phosphate."

College Rhymes

I'll tell you a story
About Harris and Terry,
And now my story's begun—
I'll tell you another
'Bout Madden and Steffner,
And now my story is done.

Little man Horner
He stood on the corner,
Watching the maidens pass by.
He shook his dark head
And to himself said:
"None please my critical eye."

Hark, Hark, the dogs do bark !
Doc. Crawford is coming to town.
The students yell
And sing like—Wells
Lest Monty should call them down.

Dickery, Dickery, dock,
Doc. Smith came out for a talk;
He stuck out his chest
With considerable zest
And scared all the rest off the block.

A Basket-ball Girl: "Oh dear! When I got through gym this morning I was completely torn out and wired. Oh! I mean worn out and tired."

A Modern Paul Revere

Listen, ye Prepites, if you would hear
Of the ride of a modern Paul Revere.
January the eighth, nineteen hundred and three,
Hardly a student could there very well be
But has heard of that wonderful night severe.

The Sophomores and Seniors, like thieves in the night
Had gone to Geneva with hearts that were light.
Now, Lampe the next night was due at a game,
So he tarried at home to rest for the same.

It was five by the court-house clock
When they glided out from the town—
It was eight when the noisy flock
Saw Geneva's palaces brown.

It was eight by the court-house clock
When the Juniors awoke to the fact
That the Sophs. were gone. With a shock
They studied the covert act.

It was ten by the driver's watch
When the banqueters, driving home,
Saw a team like a blacker blotch
On the black of the still night's gloam.

It was Lampe. "The Juniors are coming," he cried,
For when he had heard it he swiftly hied,
For he with care through alley and street
Had walked and watched with eager ears,
Till in the silence around he hears
The gathering of Juniors. He quells his fears
And starts away for his famous ride.

You know the rest. You've heard of the fight
And how they tumbled in drifts of white;
How some went home with clothes of lead
And some had handkerchiefs on their heads.
But ever in Old Allegheny's lore
Shall echo the story forever more—
How well did Seniors and Sophs. decamp,
And the wonderful ride of Samuel Lampe

—Henry Peter Hart.

You have flunked a goodly crew
Who never flunked before.
Of this you'll mightily rue
When we settle on that score.

Hulings Hall Decalogue

And Prexie spake all these words, saying:—

"I am the Man, the Only, which hath brough thee out of the shadow of obscurity, out of the darkness of poverty; thou shalt know no other authority before me.

"Thou shalt not make unto thee any dates with any man, or with any likeness of any man, that dwells in a house nearby, or that dwells in the town below, or that comes from the land beyond this town. Thou shalt but bow to them and pass them, for I, thy President, am a rigid disciplinarian, visiting the offences of the one upon the all, even down to the Freshmen and the Preps, of them that disobey me, and showing favor upon them that fear me and keep my commandments.

"Thou shalt not climb out by the rope ladder nor the rain-pipe, for the Committee will not hold her guiltless that escapeth by these means.

"Remember the Sabbath day and the record of thy church cuts.

"Six days shalt thou labor and work and cram, and the seventh shalt thou toil also. In it thou shalt not sleep, thou, nor thy roommate, nor they neighbor, nor the guest that is within thy door, for, lo, there is that compulsory church attendance.

"Jolly Mrs. Laffer and Miss Spalding that thy way may be smooth in the Hall wherein thou livest.

"Thou shalt not kill the mice that sport about thy floor, after the midnight hour, for thy neighbor sleepeth.

"Thou shalt not convert the front windows into hair-drying establishments.

"Thou shalt not steal more cream pie than thy cook giveth thee.

"Thou shalt not bear a hand in the doings of the wily Skin and Bones, nor of the bolder I. R. E.

"Thou shalt not covet thy roommate's teeth, nor her curling irons, nor her tooth-brush, nor her gentleman friend, nor anything that is thy roommate's.

"And unto her who keepeth these, my words, be exceeding great peace. Neither shall a call-card await her in Bentley."

Which Is It?

When E. T. B——m first appeared,
It brough no sudden joy;
Its mother saw its face and sighed:
"I wish it were a boy."

They sent it off to private school—
It looked real cute in curls;
The master turned on it and cried:
"Get out, we don't want girls."

The time for college came at last—
Rather an awkward case,
For everywhere it went they said:
"This ain't no co-ed place."

We have it now at Alleghe,
It's little Maudie's toy;
She says she'll take it anyhow,
And see if 'taint a boy.

Student: "I am glad to see them revive the college sing."
"Dr. Hamnett (after a bad night): I'd just as soon hear a good thunder storm."

Exams.

(With apologies to Kipling.)

Before.

Spirit of mem'ry for exam,
Mem'ry of things ne'er in our pates,
Beneath whose weight we cram and cram—
(Uphold us all, ye gracious Fates!)
Elusive mem'ry! bide with us yet—
Lest we forget—lest we forget.

During.

The tumult and the shouting dies—
(The tumult of athletic meet)—
Still in our brains those ringing cries
Sound loud as ever on the street.
Oh mem'ry true! be with us yet—
Lest we forget—lest we forget.

And now the "quiz" is on the board—
Dread searcher of our brain's small store—
Ah! By that fourth one are we "floored,"
The fatal fourth—no need for more.
Swift 'scaping mem'ry, linger yet!
For we forget—for we forget.

After.

Far called, our mem'ries swept away.
Deep sunk is hope in misery's mire.
Gone all our pomp of yesterday—
'Tis one with Nineveh and Tyre.
Ye kindly Fates! share our hard lot,
For we forgot, for we forgot.

The Hall Girls Say That

Miss Gailey will be satisfied with a Yard if she doesn't get a farm.

Miss Kraus' favorite song is "Merrill-y We Roll Along."

Miss Peterson would look better if she would quit Chasing around so much.

Stone gets all Balled-up when he goes to the Hall.

Turner claims the Bemis in his own eye.

The Kappa Kappa Gammas met with a Kat-astrophe when they lost Miss Langworthy.

Miss Rist is much impressed with the frequent Frosts of the spring term.

If Miss Terry is not more careful she will have the Squier after her.

Miss Roberts has a Farr-away look at times.

Miss Johnson had her Lampe when she went after the Mellon.

Sturtevant has no fear that she will Burnham.

In the matter of Hazen, Miss Hampson didn't like it.

For an easy job, Kearney is the best man to Hire-s.

Hewitt tries to Foster the spirit of other days.

Strickler found it hard to Love-all at once.

Ballantyne misses his Rigg somewhat.

It's not Wright to poke fun at him because he can't get a girl.

Miss McAllister looked like a Wynn-er until the town girl appeared.

Although an old-timer, when Freeman graduates he'll still be a Miner.

Miss Spalding: "Do you think, Mr. Wilcox, that Daniel Webster would have run from the platform like that?"

Mr. Wilcox: "Well, Daniel Webster was not as scared as I am."

A Week of Chapel

On Tuesday Prexie takes the stand
And speaks with force and manner grand.

A smile on Wednesday Monty wears,
But says he's all run out of prayers
And has some hand-me-downs on hand
Which answer when the times demand.

On Thursday Smith in pleasing style
Explains it to the Lord a while.

On Friday you will now be guessing
Lockwood invokes divine blessing
In terms to others quite distressing.

And Saturday, O awful day !
When Bynum gives himself away,
When students sit in fearful dread
And faculty have faces red,—
In tones like cooings of a dove
He tells us he is sick of love.

O chapel well is worth a visit;
I wouldn't for a dollar miss it.

"In speaking of him they called him the stiff."—Kincaid.

"He put on a corrugated brow and tried to look like Caesar."
—Korns.

"Got sore on humanity and was opposed to everything."—
Miss Stem.

"A maiden with a vocabulary of about 300 words."—Phy-linda Gaston.

"I wish I were a boy again, without a wife or care,
The freckles on my shining face, the hayseeds in my hair."
—Prof. Horton.

The New Faculty

In the year of 1902 the faculty of Allegheny College underwent a great change. The professor of English, commonly known as Pudge, outlived his usefulness in our midst, because we failed to appreciate a good thing when we had it; the professor of Latin was discarded to make room for a better one and also because every one was next to him; the professor of Biology, notwithstanding his boyish face, was a man and refused to let Prex walk on him; the instructor of Chemistry failing to find any one able to understand his language and because of the incompatibility of his and Monty's natures, left for better things; and the gymnasium director because (after everybody had seen through him for two years) our dearly beloved Prex found that there was a greater requirement in a professor than serving as a tool for a college president.

In the places of these men, this is what has been crowded upon us:

Doctor Albert C. Knudson, a philosopher of his own school and the husband of one of the sweetest women in town. He is distinguished by a grin that unfolds yard by yard until it exposes the entire inner man; a style of humor that appeals only to himself, and a conscience that is ingrown and apparently hurts him. One day Prex let fall a remark concerning margins and the value of a teacher that can say something after the bell rings. Knudson remembered only the last part of the statement, and when the class leaves his room twelve minutes after the bell rings they have everything Knudson knows, including the margin. He is by far the best thing that blew in this year and even though we never know what he is talking about, it is a pleasure to attend his classes and watch him.

Robert S. Breed, despite the fact that he succeeds three brilliant teachers in his department is not as bad a teacher as a year of class work under him would indicate. He also possesses a beautiful wife. Constant association with fishing worms and fossils has deprived him of all sense of humor and without a smile he can talk for two hours on a 52-hour embryo of a chick. If there is a word or a fact concerning Biology that he doesn't know he has carefully concealed it throughout his first year, and right here let us remark that any full-grown and able-bodied man that can spend a life-time reading and talking about crossopterygians and lepidodendrids and the alimentary canal of a rhizoid without seeing the joke of it, we believe there is something wrong. And laboratory hours! Like the brook they go on forever. Sleeping or awake, you will find him there filing up ahead of you, and just as surely as mortgage or interest there comes a time of reckoning. It is then that Dr. Breed shines resplendent in all his glory. Like Shylock he demands his pound of flesh or his minute of time. However, he missed his calling. He should have edited a census report.

H. Edward Wells, instructor in Chemistry, has caused the Kaldron editors much trouble. Personally, we have nothing against you except a year of your instruction, but with the rest of the college it is different. Everyone wants to take a crack at you, and the material received from them is couched in such language that the printers refuse to set the type. At least fifty have begged us to roast you, and what should be our masterpiece we realize will fall far short of the students' demands. The cause of their antipathy we cannot imagine. Mayhaps it is the tilt of your chin that seems to say: "I will only be here a short time, anyway." If that is what you mean we hope it is true. Why do you butt in on those family gatherings of the Lockwood's, Breed's and Knudson's. And the way you roll your passionate eyes. Why! If you would look that way at our wives we would reach right over the table and hand you one across the face with doubled fist.

Charles B. Lewis, as physical director of the gymnasium, was such an improvement over the lady in attendance on his department last year, that it was six months before a fault was found. At last we forgot his predecessor and an analysis shows that Lewis in seven months never uttered a sentence that didn't concern athletics. Now for a member of the faculty, a faculty that contains Prex, Ross, Smith, Monty, etc., to tend strictly to their own department is such a lowering of the standard of the faculty that we must frown. A student expressed our sentiments of you and we could do no better than repeat it: "Lewis is a h—l of a nice fellow, but I wish he wouldn't talk so much."

Dr. Frank C. Lockwood, Professor of English Language and Literature, is the proud possessor of a villainous appearance and a beautiful wife. We are sorry for her for we suppose that she, like ourselves, thought he was just "It" when she first met him. They tell us that he belongs to the school of stereotyped phrases. Everything he sees, hears about, or thinks of is "admirable." We don't want to knock you, so if you'll limber up a bit and come down from the thirty-second story and live with us awhile, we'll likely think better of you next year.

All the students have been watching Professor Edward F. Korns with more or less suspicion. He departs himself with the mien of an undertaker and talks to the students like a professional umpire to a scrub college baseball team. We were requested to jump on you with considerable force if thereby we might knock out of you some of that I-know-it-all disposition, but after reading the Mt. Union Annual and learning how badly you had been slandered, we decided to let you off with a few jabs in the wind.

"Though a man of football physique,
His heart was exceedingly weak;
While he much loved the girl,
With his brain in a whirl,
He hadn't the courage to speak."

—J. E. Kelley.

Member of Faculty at Post Office, complaining about poor mail service—"It's an outrage to ask the people of this city to put up with it and I am going to write to the War Department about it."

Note to Contributors: Don't ask the editors why they didn't use your copy. The aim of the business manager was not to produce a first-class Annual, but to publish a book that would look like a circus poster, hence the absence of about twenty-five pages of good material.

THE fact is once more brought to the attention of the students that only through the liberal patronage of the business men, whose advertisements appear herein, can this or any other college publication attain any degree of success. Our advertisers are our friends and deserve our entire patronage. We thank them for their support.

"Public Homes."

It has been built and equipped and is operated in a manner to please the most exacting. It enjoys the patronage of those who, weary from overwork, or convalescing from illness, need rest, a mild tonic, pure, bracing atmosphere and pleasant surroundings.

The Rider Mineral Waters are medicines direct from Nature's Laboratory, sparkling, palatable, pure and health-giving. They flow unceasingly from fountains within the Spring Room of Hotel Rider, and at the spacious Springs Pavilion, and are partaken of with wondrous good effect by the thousands who journey hither to drink them.

These waters are a specific in the treatment of all stomach, liver, kidney and bladder troubles, and are potent in removing the cause of rheumatism, neuralgia and gout.

The country surrounding Cambridge Springs is unsurpassed for beauty, and the roads afford delight to all who are fond of driving or wheeling.

Among the appointments of Hotel Rider are: All rooms large, light, well ventilated and comfortably furnished; fifty suites with private baths; complete Russian and Turkish Bath Apartments; Theatre; grand ball room; Gymnasiums for both sexes; Solariums; Natatoriums; and all out-door amusements, including an excellent Golf course.

course of study extending over four years. During the first and second years special stress is placed upon the study of the fundamental and theoretical branches and training in scientific methods and technique, while the third and fourth years are devoted to practical studies, to the application of the medical sciences, the acquisition of professional skill in the dispensaries, at the bedside, and in the hospital.

In every department of this college the classes

Crowning Year in Our History!
What Makes it so?
Listen and We Will Tell You in a Few Words.

more have done so handling views than by any other means. At the same time they gained an experience which has been as valuable to them as what they learned in college, if not more so. One old Allegheny man expressed himself in this way: "I believe I owe more of my present success to what I learned while selling views, than I owe to what I learned in the same time in college." The two go hand in hand. One is gaining the principles of success from books, and the other is learning how to apply these principles.

The student who wants to learn the greatest lesson, But he must get out and mingle with men, And reach the summit of his profession, And study to know them, and then Must study man, the greatest book written, Will he be able to enter the strife, But he can't do it while he's sittin' For fame and fortune and a successful life, At home in an easy chair, And then will he be able to stand fast, And wishing that he could get there, When father and money are things of the past, With the one who has a good place, For he has learned a lesson and a thing or two, And who, in college, carried a canvassing case, While out selling the Keystone View.

Another thing which goes to make this our crowning year, is the many new and striking views which have recently been added, and other improvements we have made in assisting our salesmen. We call special attention to our wonderful Martinique and St. Vincent views; also views from other islands of the West Indies, Central America and Venezuela. In addition to these, we have many new things from Canada, British Isles, Germany and many other countries.

Another thing which is increasing the business of our salesmen is our NEW SETS. One set in particular is proving to be very valuable. It contains 72 of the most noted and characteristic scenes of the countries represented. Ten boys, most of them new men in the view work, left a certain college not long ago and have made on an average $100 per month each—not a single failure in the lot. We have Allegheny College students with us at present who are making from $75 to $150 per month above expenses. Do you want to be among them? We will gladly give further particulars if you will call upon or address,
