NEW SERIES.

SPLENDID VICTORY OVER THE YALE FIVE.

Yale's Third Defeat in Succession on Local Floor.

Sons of Eli Play Great Ball but are Out-Starred by Allegheny's Invincibles.—Game Characterized by Rough Playing.
Final Outcome 27 to 17.

In the fastest and roughest game ever played on the local floor and amid the intense excitement of five hundred spectators the Allegheny basket ball team initiated the 1906 season by defeating the fast Yale university team by the score of 27 to 17. The game began with a rush and every moment of play was filled with sensational plays and instances of surprising team work. The work of the team has improved very much since the practice game with Edinboro last week. The new men on the team have satisfied the highest hopes that their friends have had and with the confidence which this victory will give and a little more practice the season of 1906 should be as successful as any previous season. The game was very rough and the men should be a little more careful and use their heads more and have less rough and tumble play.

The first half was all in Allegheny's favor with 7 goals and one foul to Yale's one goal and one foul, but in the second half Yale got together and played the better game securing five goals and four fouls to Allegheny's four goals and four fouls. Each team was in to win and the play was very much of a man to man contest, each man guarding his opponent as if the game depended upon that one man. Both teams should be commended upon the way they accepted the decisions of the officials. There was some little squaring off as for a fight but nothing more developed. This should be entirely done away with. The spectators were exceedingly fair and acted for the most part in the most gentlemanly manner.

The lineup:
Allegheny Yale
Rossiter R F Humpstone
Mason L F Murphy
Comfort C Fargo
Giesey R G Burrows
Ferry L G Cushman
Officials—Church—Werner
Goals: Comfort 7, Rossiter 3; Ferry, Murphy, Humpstone, Burrows, 1; Cushman 3. Fouls: Comfort, 5, Murphy 5.

It is deplorable that the accommodations at the gymnasium are such that the first rush crowd at a game cannot be handled better so that the patrons are not kept out in the cold so long. Inside, however, the arrangements for the spectators were very good and the college band did much to while away the long delay.

PRESIDENT CRAWFORD DISCUSSES FOOT-BALL.

GRATIFYING PRESS COMMENTS.

New York Times Prints in Full President Crawford's Remarks at the National Foot Ball Conference Held Recently in New York City.

The New York Times in commenting on the National Foot Ball Conference, held at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York City, December 28th, says: "The views of Pres. W. H. Crawford, of Allegheny College, as to the work that properly belongs to the foot ball conference were eminently sensible and showed a conception of the true conditions that most of the theorists lacked. In discussing this phase of the situation he said:

"The most important work of this conference is the question of reforming the eligibility code and correcting the evils of importation, professionalism and commercialism in sport. Too little attention has been given by the faculty to the conduct of the game, and I believe we should take that end of the game directly under our supervision while leaving the technical end to those experts who are capable of dealing with it. We certainly are not.

I heartily approve the resolutions. They are what we most want. Three-fourths of what we are here for is to do something about the question of eligibility and the management of the game. Our great responsibility as educators in this foot ball matter is not with rules. They ought to be changed. Everybody admits that. They will be changed, too, and by experts. The problem we face is a far more serious one than that of rules. It affects the whole spirit of the game. If we settle the question of eligibility, and settle it right, and do the same for the management of the game we shall have gone a long way toward the end we desire.

I come from Western Pennsylvania. There the problem I have described is a very serious one. The faculties of our colleges sustain delightful relations to each other, but we have made no attempt to come together for the purpose of making pure our athletics. It is common among us for men to enter college in the spring, and two days after registering to be on the 'varsity' base ball team. We go out after men for the sake of foot ball and base ball, offering all sorts of inducements. It isn't a thing unknown among us for a man to go from the foot ball team of one college to the foot ball team of another in mid-season. Scholarships are offered to promising players. Professionalism is winked at. We have no eligibility rules of any kind. I know of one man among us who has just finished his seventh year of college or university foot ball, and I understand he expects to keep on two or three years more.

Such things as I have described ought not to be possible anywhere. Our duty is clear. We must banish commercialism and professionalism from athletics, we must abolish the 'to win' spirit and replace it with the 'manly game' spirit. I believe in athletics, vigorous athletics, too, but we must have clean athletics. Better no athletics than that our colleges be smirched with trickery, foul play, brutal practices, and the mercenary spirit.

Faculties and governing bodies can no longer shirk responsibility. The public eye is on us. Public sentiment is outraged at things which have happened. We dare not do less than make open declaration in the name of the colleges that we represent that the evils of foot ball must go.

Foot ball, with the ethical evils eliminated, ought to be and can be a help in realizing our college ideals and not a hindrance. It is for us to see and hold to the good in the game, and put away all that does not conduce to manhood and high educational standards."

EXPRESSIONS OF DEEPEST SYMPATHY

FROM FACULTY AND STUDENTS.

College and City Mourn Tragic Death of Mrs. Breed—Touching Resolutions Adopted by Faculty and Student-body.

The gloom and sorrow which hung like a pall over our college campus during the closing days before the Christmas recess, cannot be described in mere words. They are too sacred for that. In a peculiar and inexpressible way the awful tragedy came very close to the heart of every student and instructor. The intense personal sadness which accompanied the full realization of loss and bereavement, found expression in touching words of sympathy.

Faculty Resolutions.
In the sudden taking away of Mrs. Robert S. Breed, we as a faculty have suffered a severe shock and a profound sense of personal bereavement. For over three years she has been a cheering and inspiring influence in our community. She has endeared herself to every one who came to know her, by her winsome personality and her sterling character. Tender and loving and faithful in the home, she was enthusiastic in her devotion to the interests of the college. Every student will feel a distinct sense of loss at her departure and the whole college will for years to come treasure her memory.

With most poignant sorrow at this deep affliction which we, both as individuals and as a community, have suffered, be it

Resolved, That we, the faculty of Allegheny College, express our very high appreciation of a life so genuine and useful and beautiful; and that we convey to our grief-stricken brother our tenderest sympathy in his great bereavement, the bitterness of which can be assuaged only by the Divine Comforter.

Student Resolutions.
Whereas, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to take from our midst Mrs. Louise H. Breed, one whose simple and beautiful character we have learned to honor and esteem, and

Whereas, We, as a student-body, do feel keenly the loss of one who was our sincere and devoted friend; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the students of Allegheny College, do hereby express our heartfelt sorrow at her untimely departure from this life, and be it

Resolved, That our sincerest sympathies be extended to her bereaved husband and family, and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions appear on the pages of our college publications.

At the chapel service on the day following the sad catastrophe, President Crawford spoke as follows.

President's Crawford's Tribute.

There are times when silence is more eloquent than speech. This morning is such a time. We are dazed and stunned by the most terrible calamity which has ever occurred in all the history of this college. Once more the great announcement has come to us, "In the midst of life we are in death," and we have heard again the great exhortation, "Be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." In the midst of our blinding sorrow we have one comfort. There remains with us and will ever remain with us the memory of one of the loveliest Christian characters who ever came into our life on this college hill. A woman of rare charm and personality, supremely happy in her home life, glad in the new joy of motherhood,

In drawing up the report, the sub-committee, consisting of Dr. W. A. Elliott, (chairman), Mr. C. W. Gill, and Mr. J. R. Crawford, has closely followed the sentiment expressed by the general committee at its last meeting, and has endeavored to cover the ground pretty thoroughly. Any suggestions or additions will be gladly received by members of the general committee before their final meeting on January 17.

Articles of agreement governing the Campus to be voted upon January 17, 1906:

He shall keep three files of the Campus in which he shall mark with an appropriate symbol each week the matter furnished by each competitor. He shall preserve in suitable envelopes, one for each competitor, all matter which has been handed in, but not published. These files of the Campus and the envelopes shall be handed over to the executive committee on the Monday following the second Saturday of May, to be submitted to the Judges on Competition as provided for in Article II, Sec. 1.

Entered as Second-Class matter October 30, 1904, at the Postoffice at Meadville, Pa., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

A cloud of sorrow hung heavily over the college campus when we separated for the Christmas recess. It is upon us yet. We do not get away from the sad tragedy. Nor do we forget our great loss. A beautiful life was suddenly taken from us. Generous, bright, and wholesome she was, always so, and suddenly—all we know is that she is not and we mourn. We know this much more, that she is crowned with immortality and that we have radiant memories of a beautiful life,

"gone before to that unknown and silent shore."

Our hearts go out in sympathy to the brave, true man who, in his loneliness but with firm courage, is going about his work among us. If we can help him bear his burden, we would do it. Our honor, our respect, our tenderest sympathy are his in his hour of sorrow.

EXPRESSIONS OF DEEPEST SYMPATHY.

respected and loved by all who knew her—such a woman she was whose loss we so deeply mourn. The call came without a moment's warning. There was the tragic crash! And after that simply

"A quiver, a pause of the heart;
A vision of angels, then heaven."

For our good brother and friend who sits in his lonely desolation this morning I can only ask you to do what you are doing. Pray for him, and pray earnestly. I wish you could know his fine Christian fortitude. The blow is heavy. How keenly he feels it none of us can know; but his trust is in the "strong Sea of God and His immortal love."

The Rev. Mr. Bugbee, of the First M. E. church, conducted the funeral services at the home on North Main street, and paid a beautiful tribute to the deceased.

Mr. Bugbee's Remarks.

I think the providence of God never presses more heavily upon the human vant, Death, knocks at the gate of some unconsciously happy and contented home; when He summons one of two devoted souls across its threshold.

How cry these broken homes to Thee! O God of mercy, God of love; Where life's glad songs were carolled free

And hope's fair rainbow bent above. These rifted nests, these shattered dreams,

These little heavens begun below.

We have no quarrel with death when a man comes to his grave at a full age like a stock of corn cometh into season. It is not unnatural that the golden harvest should be gathered before they run to waste. It is not unseemly that a man should take his departure when, like the apostle, he has "fought a good fight and finished his course," and come quietly to the evening of his day. But when death violates thus rudely the peace of these fresh and happy homes; when he summons the head of the family in the midst of his years, or when he calls the devoted house-mother from her tender tasks, then one's heart cries out in pain. Is not this a wilful wrecking of love's most precious fabric? for a home is a most divine and wondrous work; created slowly and painfully out of deepening affection and widening experience.

Ah, these nests of ours! How tenderly they are built out of many a leaf and twig gathered at infinite expense of pain and care. How warmly they are feathered with the softest down of a mother's love and a father's gentleness. How strongly they are bound together with golden threads spun out of passionate hearts. Golden threads, I say, yet they become like bands of steel when they have been tempered in the fire of mutual suffering and of mutual sacrifice. And so I say it's a terrible thing to have these nests rifted of our treasures and broken up by what seems to be the cruel wind of destiny, which leaves us lonely and shivering upon the brink of life's abyss of mystery.

Ah, these homes; these broken homes! How cry they unto Thee, O, God of Mercy, God of Love! What shall we then say to these things? It is useless to ask and answer the question. It is vain to seek an explanation. There are only two things that we can do. First, we may remind ourselves of how little we know of anything. We see in this world only processes, not ends; understanding only the part, not the whole. We see life not clearly, but through a glass darkly. We only see the figure in the making, and all about is the dust and the rubbish, and the flying chips of the sculpture. We cannot conceive what it may be in its perfection. We should not be able to imagine the completed beauty of some masterpiece of painting had we stood beside the artist on that first morning in his studio when he began to lay the background on the canvas and dimly to outline the figures in his conception. It would have seemed to us only a meaningless chaos of color and of shade.

It is at least equally impossible for us to anticipate what may be the glorious products of human character which may result from what seems to us in our day senseless and chaotic agony of life. And then, too, we may remember this, that there stood up One among us long ago; One who was a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief, whose infinite sensitiveness of nature made every blow and pain of life seem far more keen and bitter than they can ever seem to us whose breadth of knowledge and exquisite fund of sympathy brought Him into contact with the great world's sorrow in its most intense and appalling forms; and yet, knowing all this, feeling all this, in spite of all this, He dared to stand up among us and say that God was still our Father, and that all was well. And out of the deepest darkness of His own midnight of perplexity of pain He could still lift up His heart in those golden words, "My Father, My Father."

Ah, this dauntless, deathless faith of Jesus Christ blazes in the midst of our darkest night of pain like the cheerful light of the undimmed and constant star, and so, though we may not understand, and though nothing may be known, we may believe in the conviction of our Christian faith that God is overhead and that as life is to the living so death is to the dead; and we may say with Whittier—

"Midst all this maddening maze of things and tossed by storm and flood,

To one fixed trust my spirit clings—

I know that God is good."

Life is serious enough business at its best, and for most of us besides our faith in God the joy of living comes mostly from the sunshine of nature and from the light radiated by healthy, wholesome, happy faces. There are some natures so genuine, so artless; so natural in the child-like honesty of disposition that all the artificialities and all the affectations of the world do not dim the spontaneous gladness of their hearts. They move among us always like happy children. They are like wandering sunbeams penetrating our darkest nights, illuminating our gloomiest moods. Their presence is a benediction, for they radiate the pure and lustrous joy of living.

Such an one, such an one has gone out from us. A sunbeam that wandered earthward has been gathered back into the heaven from whence it came. The world will be darker to some of us; the stars will not shine tonight except dimly through mists of tears; but that other world—ah, it must be brighter there because of her coming. And so I cannot say, I will not say that she is dead. She is just away—with a cheerful smile and a beckoning hand, she hath wandered into that unknown land, and left us wondering how very fair it needs must be, since she lingers there.

Following the service and the departure of all but the near friends, the remains were taken to Erie train 6, the following friends assisting as bearers: Dr. W. A. Elliott, Dr. W. T. Dutton, Dr. Frank C. Lockwood, Professor Edward Wells and Dr. Albert C. Knudson, of the Allegheny College faculty, and Mr. Frederick Breed, principal of the preparatory school, and cousin of Dr. Robert S. Breed. The remains were taken to Brooklyn, Susquehanna county, Pa., and Dr. Breed was accompanied by Rev. Mr. Bugbee and Dr. Breed's brother, Mr. Fitch Breed, and wife, of Brooklyn, and Professor H. E. Wells, taking with them Dr. Breed's baby daughter.

Mr. Alfred G. Church, of this city, whose son, Gaylord Church, was one of the recent victims, was one of the recent victims, says that when he visited his son at Christmas time, no complaint was made, but that all are well satisfied with the treatment received. The investigating committee was formed in December and the court martial is the result. The boys are compelled to give evidence in order to stamp out the hazing. Young Church says that so far as he knows, that unless the middies are able to stand what they have thus far been compelled to do, they are not fit to be in the navy.

Bishop Vincent Gives Chapel Talk.

Brief but Inspiring Address by Prominent Educators.

The student-body was addressed at chapel Thursday morning by Bishop John H. Vincent, of the Methodist Episcopal church. His utterance, coming from such an enthusiastic educationalist, was exceptionally interesting. It is remarkable that in such a brief informal talk a man could touch the keynote of so many live topics of the day in such a masterly manner.

After a seven-years absence from the college, the bishop spoke forcibly of the present conditions, especially of the value of the present service in the ideal college chapel. Such a service participated in morning after morning could not help, he said, but do much in moulding character.

The speaker, who is in every way in sympathy with the college work, stated that above all things the student should avoid the evil of specializing. To enter college with every energy bent toward preparing for a definite life work means failure to obtain all that is best in a college education. The college is to discover the man. It is to locate and develop the latent powers and to realize the limitations. After the completion of the collegiate course the man will have found himself and then there will be time to decide what vocation can be entered most successfully.

A second point of advice was that every graduate should endeavor to supplement the college journey with a visit to Europe. It is an experience, an education that is well worth sacrifice. It will do more than any other thing to give the broad horizon. It is an excellent preparation for present American citizenship. It will bring the man into touch with the great feeding sources of the American population. He will learn to appreciate the emigrants' ambitions and problems and to have a deeper sympathy for them.

This matter of American citizenship is a subject for deep study by college people, for they are to be the citizens of tomorrow. No training in this branch can be too deep for the coming requirements. A keen view of some of the political situations of the day was given in closing. The address was one to be remembered and one to be thought about.
