Tribune Building, Room 91,

My dear Miss Tarbell:

I was compelled to delay sending you this list, in order to make it up-to-date as far as possible—even now I am not absolutely certain as to a few, for at times when I make inquiry as to an old comrade I am told: "Oh, he is dead." In the main you will find the list correct.

In writing you can say the names were given you by me. W. B. Palmer, of Richmond, Robt. M. Harrover, of Washington D.C. and Charles H. Dear, of Washington, Rappahannock Co., Va., are better posted, I think, concerning the whereabouts, etc., of the members of our old command than anyone now living. They gave me great assistance in my work. If you mention the fact that I gave you their names and told you to write them it may cause them to be more prompt than they otherwise might be.

I had hoped to be able to hand you this in person but the fates have been against me—though I should not think it a hardship to plead as an excuse that I have been too busy.

Anything I can do to aid in your good work will be cheerfully done.

Wishing you every success, I remain

Yours very truly

D. J. Williamson

The majority of the other members of the command are, or were, engaged in farming or stock raising. Some that I have lost track of sought employment in various branches of trade or business and like those that I have enumerated were scattered through the country.
