Though innumerable histories of the Civil War have been published, this is the first to give an adequate account of the vital factor in the conduct of war - the activitiew of the government and its people behind the lines.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. It presents for the first time a complete interpretation of Lincoln's difficulties with Congress, with legal and constitutional red tape, with states rights, with profiteering, conscription, recruiting, political spoils and robbery, political interference and obstacles, the complex social factors, etc.

The Organization and Administration of the Union Army 1861-1865

by

FRED ALBERT SHANNON, PH.D.

With Analytical Index, Bibliography, plates, and facsimiles. Handsomely printed in large Caslon type, on handmade paper, deckled edges. Two large volumes, 8vo, cloth, uncut, gilt tops. $25.00 net.

100 sets were printed in excess of those ordered in advance of publication. The work will not be reprinted. The entire edition consists of 475 sets. Most of these were subscribed for by public and college libraries; hence as soon as the remaining 75 sets are sold, we look for the work to materially advance in price and become very difficult to secure.

HOUGH innumerable histories of the Civil War have been published, not one of them contains an adequate, authentic account of the most vital factor in the conduct of war, namely, the activities of the government and people behind the lines. A few words or paragraphs occur here and there referring to the first calls for troops and attempts at conscription, then the authors plunge into accounts of the battles and campaigns. They leave entirely to the imagination of the reader the manner in which these armies were gathered together, fed, equipped, recruited, and fitted. Nothing is said of the blunders and mistakes that affected the efficiency of the armies or became a factor in the loss of thousands of lives through lack of proper equipment and supplies.

"Awarded the Justin Winsor prize by the American Historical Association, as the most distinct constribution to American history issued during 1927-1928."
