Mrs. May C. Whitaker,

Cleveland, Ohio.

My dear Mrs. Whitaker:

Yes, indeed, I remember meeting you in Cleveland and our little talk about the Tarbells. I am glad it brought me the copy of your "Mothercraft" book. It is an excellent setting forth of the mothers business. I am glad to have it to pass on to my friends occupied in being mothers.

What you tell me of yours is very heartening. It is good to know of someone who was successful in combining two trades, or careers, as people love to call them. I have profound admiration for the women who do it. While I know it can be done for I have seen many brilliant successes, I have always doubted my own capacity to carry it through.

As to the interview to which you refer. A young woman appeared unannounced before my desk one day when I was very busy and questioned me along these lines and in my irratation I made some harsh comments in answer. I did not see the article she wrote until the other day, when someone forwarded it to me, who, like yourself, had been stirred by it to write me a letter.

With very best success to you,

Very sincerely

IMT BWK.
