Dear Miss Tarbell:

I am pleased to send you a copy of a book for review which I hope you may find to be an interesting and unique item in contemporary publishing. This book was printed privately in an edition of 250 copies by the Holiday Press - a group of craftsmen who work at the Lakeside Press in Chicago - men who care enough for their work to enjoy doing it as an avocation out of working hours. Every detail including type composition, presswork and binding was done by the hands of these men in working on their own time and for their own pleasure.

It contains Carl Sandburg's sketch of Lincoln's life in the White House and an appraisal of Whitman. It also has reproductions of many rare items in relation to the life of Lincoln, as well as portraits of Lincoln, Whitman and Sandburg.

We think almost anyone will admit that these three great Americans have much in common. This book preserves something of the spirit of that idea.

It is requested that in reviewing the book, you make no quotation from the author's text, but you are welcome to quote from, or reproduce any of the documents, letters, or illustrations, if you wish to do so. If you see fit to make a review we would greatly appreciate receiving a copy.

Cordially yours,

A. N. Sellery
