To Ida M Tarbell,

My dear Madam. - Enclosed are a few of the sayings of A. Lincoln or supposed sayings. And Lincoln say such things. Are these and other such paraded sayings written in your book. If so is it possible for you to give me the chapter and volume where I can find it. I'll order the books immediately. I think Lincoln said such things. And I want the proof of them.
All all of such sayings. I can find

"Yes, we may all congratulate ourselves that this cruel war is nearly to a close. It has cost a vast amount of treasure and blood. The best blood of the flower of American youth has been freely offered upon our country's altar, that the nation might live. It has been indeed a trying hour for the republic; but I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money-power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in a few hands and the republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant, that my suspicion may prove groundless."

Abraham Lincoln, in Letter shortly before his assassination, quoted in "What is Coming", by Lyman E. Stowe. Page 139.

"Monarchy is sometimes hinted at as a possible refuge from the power of the people. In my present position I would be scarcely justified were I to omit exercising a warning voice against returning despotism. There is one point to which I ask attention. It is the effort to place capital on an equal footing with, if not above labor, in the structure of the government. I bid the laboring people beware of surrendering a power which they already possess, and which, when surrendered, will surely be used to close the door of advancement to such as they, and fix new disabilities and burdens upon them till all of liberty shall be lost."

Abraham Lincoln, in Message to Congress, 1861, quoted in What is Coming, by Lyman E. Stowe, who says. Page 126. See 3

I want the reader to bear this in mind as I shall show that it was for this sentiment that Mr. Lincoln was assassinated by the money-power conspirators."
