

242 East 19th Street

Dec. 30, 1937

My very dear kind friend,

When speaking on the telephone with your secretary I learned that you were leaving town for Christmas to return at the close of this week. I've waited, therefore, till now to give my grateful thanks to you for the marvellous that gives both tang and sweetness to my breakfasts. Thank you most of all for a friendship that yearly grows more precious.

You have come to me through Jac, I know. The loved to bring his friends together and could there be any finer legacy from a man so generous as his?

My love for the two
Year, as for all years since
I've loved you!

Affectionately, Annie Flint.

Memo for Christmas List:

One of the points in the Christmas list comes out in this letter of Anna Flint's. Here is a friend or one of your dearest friends - Jac. He was one of her dearest friends. Therefore, the Christmas list finds us remembering one another, partly in commemoration to Jac. to whom we cannot Christmas cards any longer. Thus, the Christmas list carries on old friendships, memories of those who are in their grave. It is a continuing process of affection.