

4100 North Charles St.,

Baltimore, Md.

April 22, 1927.

My Dear Miss Tarbell;

In reply to your letter of the 18th I would like to thank you for your expression of interest in my article. I am glad to learn that you are in general agreement with my position.

The anatomist to whom I referred is Dr. Piersol, who used to be the Professor of Anatomy at the University of Pennsylvania. My quotation was based upon a conversation with him held a number of years ago, while he was instructing me in brain dissection. Dr. Piersol died several years ago and I know of nothing in his writings which would support the statement he made ; though there may be such passages.

May I suggest the use of the Psychological Index, which comes out each year, as an instrument to assist you in finding books and articles on all psychological topics. If there is anything in which I can assist you kindly let me know.

Very sincerely yours,

HCM/EM

H. C. McComas