A SECOND VICTORY.

Allegheny Defeats Washington and Jefferson.

WAS A CLEAN AND CLOSE GAME

Score Was Tied at the Beginning of the Ninth Inning
Final Score 3 to 2 for Local Collegians.

Monday afternoon, in one of the most stubbornly fought games that has been seen on the local grounds for some time, the strong baseball aggregation representing Washington and Jefferson College went down to defeat before the aggressive playing of the Allegheny College boys with the score standing 3 to 2 in the ninth inning. Barring several errors on the part of Allegheny early in the game both teams played gilt-edge ball.

The day was ideal baseball weather and the enthusiastic rooters of the local team, both of the college and of the town, turned out in large numbers to witness the game. Nor were the people disappointed with the line of goods put up by the home team. Time and again the grandstand resounded with the loud applause of the spectators in response to brilliant plays of both teams.

The Washington and Jefferson boys got in their most effective work during the second and third innings. One run was given the visitors in each of these innings but from this stage of the fight they were not permitted to score again. While the W. and J. fellows put up a hard fight neither of these scores would have been registered in an errorless game. Eckles, who was the first man to cross home plate, did so on a wild throw to third. It was during this inning that the local team seemed to show some evidence of weakness. The visitors second run was also scored on an error, this one to the first baseman who failed to retire the third man. Outside of these two errors the playing of Allegheny was above criticism.

The feature of the game was the remarkable work of Lockwood in the box. Although at times somewhat wild, he played a close, consistent game. Throughout the entire nine innings he gave but two hits and had to his credit nine strikeouts. With a little more experience Lockwood promises to be an exceptionally valuable addition to Allegheny's pitching force. The work of Heilman also was particularly noticeable. He covers his field in a most able manner.

W. and J. went to bat first with Eriser leading the batting order. This man was given a free pass but caught while trying to steal second base. Ridgely fanned and Welty was retired on a fly to Heilman. Turner was the first man to face Springer who failed to get the ball over home plate the required number of times. Selkregg managed to land the leather sphere on unoccupied territory and was good for first. Wynn, however, was not so fortunate and was out, pitcher to first. Lewis failed to connect with the ball and retired in favor of Russell who was out second to first.

During the second inning W. and J. crossed home plate for one run. Moldon failed to hit safe but Eckles, who followed him at bat drove the ball deep into right field and arrived safely at first. The next man fanned but was safe on a passed ball. Eckles, who had by this time reached third, came home on a wild throw by Mook. The next two men fanned. Thus the score stood 1-0 in favor of the visitors. During this inning Allegheny failed to score.

The third inning again saw a W. and J. man cross home plate. This score would not have counted had Lewis, the first baseman, made sure of his man on first. In the next inning Allegheny was more fortunate and Russell crossed home plate for the first run. Neither side than scored until the 8th inning. One run in this inning tied the score. The ninth inning marked the critical point of the game. Here Lockwood was at his best and retired three men in succession. Allegheny made good, however, and won out, with two men on bases. The winning run was made by Mook after a thrilling bit of seesaw between third and home.

STUDENTS PLAY POLITICS.

Oberlin Will Hold Eleventh Mock National Convention.

The eleventh mock Republican national convention given by the college literary societies will be held the evening of June 6. The first of these mock conventions was held in 1860, and as each presidential year comes around the men and women of the college spend weeks of energetic work in preparation for the event. The full quota of 924 delegates will be present, and a national ticket for the November election will be nominated.

Paul Howland, of Cleveland, will be temporary chairman of the convention and it is expected that Lieutenant Governor Harding will be the permanent chairman.

Respect for the Aged.

"Confound that young fellow fresh from college," growled an eminent conversationalist, now in the sere and yellow of his anecdote. "he always caps my best stories."

"Very good manners, especially in a university man," observed a convive. "Good manners!" returned the other irascibly. "How?"

"Why," explained his friend, "when he meets with a story or joke as venerable as it is excellent, he caps it as he would a respected old Don of his college."—Punch.

Girls' Tennis Association.

The Young Women's Tennis Association held its annual election of officers Thursday evening. Many new members were enrolled. A tournament will be held at the end of the term and playing will be commenced on the two out-door courts at once. The following officers were elected: President, Edith Rowley; secretary and treasurer, Margaret McLaughlin; keeper of court, Mabel West.

Mission Study Class.

The Mission Study Class held a very interesting meeting Friday evening. Dr. Smith read portions from the biography of Horace Tracy Pitkin, whose life was lost in the Boxer uprising. The two concluding meetings of the year will be devoted to a further discussion of missionary interests in China.

Syracuse Debaters Chosen

Freeman, Sturtevant and Stockton Will Defend Allegheny Against Syracuse.

Freeman, Sturtevant and H. J. Stockton are the debaters against Syracuse. Such was the decision of the judges at the close of the preliminary debate on Friday. No decision was rendered as to the winning side. The men chosen have a little less than three weeks to complete their preparation for the final event of May 17.

The debate on Friday afternoon was remarkable in that more thoroughness and thought were shown by the speakers than in any other contest of the kind held at Allegheny for years. The question was, Resolved, that trade unions are injurious to industrial welfare. The contestants for place on the regular team had taken sides as follows: Affirmative—Mansell, Pollock and Sturtevant; negative—Freeman, Stockton and Reynolds.

The speakers were each allowed 15 minutes. With the intermissions the debate lasted two hours. All of the speakers showed surprising improvement upon anything they have done heretofore. The general tone of the debate was much higher than that of the one which debated the same question some weeks ago. A broader view was taken of the subject. The debate showed most thorough preparation on the part of the contestants.

The men chosen as the three best debaters in the college will form a hard team for Syracuse to defeat. The masterful way in which they handled their subject matter on Friday makes Allegheny confident as to the result of May 17.

Mr. Freeman came into prominence in college forensics two years ago by winning the Parson prize and later in the same year the Inter-collegiate contest. Since that time he has spoken in contests and on various other occasions. His style of expression and his easy delivery make him an effective speaker.

Mr. Sturtevant, while he has only on one occasion debated at Allegheny, nevertheless has had considerable experience in that work. He was active in debating at Bordentown Military Institute and while in that institution was on the team which won the annual inter-scholastic debate. His work in the Freshman-Sophomore debate was remarkable. Mr. Sturtevant has a fine presence and is an eloquent speaker.

Mr. Stockton during his entire course has been identified with Allegheny oratory and debating. He has taken part in various literary, society and other contests. He is a very forceful, emphatic speaker and has a fine choice of words. He never fails to have his audience with him and will add much strength to the team.

The attendance at the debate on Friday was very light. The conscientious work of the speakers and the fact that the inter-collegiate team was to be chosen deserved the presence of every student but the number present fell far short of that mark. The seeming lack of interest is to be regretted for the team in order to do justice to itself in its preparation for Syracuse must feel that it has the sincere interest and backing of the entire student-body.

The decision of the judges follows:

	Freeman	Sturtevant	Stockton	Mansell	Pollock	Reynolds
Dutton	2	1	5	4	3	6
Ross	1	5	4	3	6	2
Montgomery	3	1	2	5	6	4

The Teutonic Banquet.

The Boarding Clubs Hei Away to Cambridge for Their Second Annual Feast.

On Thursday, after a week or more of careful preparation on the part of committees, the Tentons or non-fraternity men-students of the college, collected in front of the gymnasium at about 7 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of making the trip to Cambridge Springs where they were to celebrate their second annual feast. The high spirits which prevailed during the wait for the car made it evident that the Tentons were going to show the inhabitants of Cambridge Springs what college spirit is.

The car came and there was a grand rush for seats. It was soon filled to overflowing and men were compelled to stand on the platform. The journey was made with much singing and yelling. Each club had its own yells and the country people along the route were startled by the echoes of college life. At Cambridge a line was formed two abreast, the clubs keeping together, and the column proceeded to show the town the "real Allegheny." Following the leadership of a couple of guides the line passed through the various streets of the town serenading. They then proceeded to the New Cambridge Hotel where the feast was served.

The carnations which decorated the table blended well with the white and blue which the men wore on the lapels of their coat. The menu was such as few Allegheny banqueters have ever enjoyed and such as shall cause the Tentons to ever speak in highest praise of the New Cambridge Hotel. Much brilliancy and wit displayed itself in the presentation of the toasts. After the banquet the men betook themselves to the car which made a quick run to Meadville.

The climax of it all was carried out with even more enthusiasm than was shown before, when the Tentons on leaving the car marched to Hulings Hall. Such a display of fire works and red light has seldom been seen on the campus. The hall seemed almost to be ablaze and the participants will not soon forget the beauty of that midnight scene. After this exhibition they proceeded to the home of Dr. Montgomery, which they serenaded, and from whence they went to their respective homes. Over 80 students took part in the banquet. NEW HEAD FOR TRINITY COLLEGE.

Dean Luther Made President of Hartford Institution of Learning.

At a meeting of the trustees of Trinity College Dean Flavel Sweeten Luther, Jr., who has been acting president during the last year, was elected president of the college. A meeting of a nominating committee appointed by the trustees last June was held in the Allyn House. No name other than that of Professor Luther was mentioned, and the latter was unanimously recommended for election.

Professor Luther was born in Brooklyn, Conn., in 1850. He was graduated from Trinity in 1870, and taught in the Racine High School until 1881, when he was made a professor in Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. In 1883 Dr. Luther was made Seabury professor of mathematics in Trinity, which office he still holds. Professor Luther's presidency will begin on July 1, but he will not be officially inaugurated until October.

A Few Pointers About Clothes.

Don't infer that our goods are inferior to the best makes, because they sell for less money.

Because the doctor found a harness under the bed he had no reason to infer that the patient swallowed a horse. We know we have today the strongest line of Union Made clothing in the city. This is talking big, but we have the goods and the prices to back it.

Won't you step in and give us a chance to show you these goods and see whether or not our talk is right.

NOW FOR SYRACUSE.

The debate last Friday was undoubtedly the best and keenest ever held at Allegheny, the debaters as resourceful and brilliant as those any other institution can produce. The task now before us is to win from Syracuse—a most glorious deed if we can do it. The job is the biggest thing Allegheny ever tackled in the debating line and one fraught with no small moment.

Syracuse for the past three months has been preparing for Allegheny. She will send here a team which has trained for the event as arduously, as scientifically as any athletic team.

We at Allegheny must co-operate with our men in every possible way if they are to win. The team itself above everything else must have system. It ought to have definite systematic coaching in argument from some capable member of the faculty, which the college authorities will undoubtedly arrange for.

In addition to this arrangements ought to be made for putting the men under the direction of our instructor of oratory. Each one of them has various defects to be remedied, each one will wield his argument much more effectively if placed under capable instruction. We can afford to leave nothing undone which bears even in the remotest way upon victory.

A FABLE.

Said Legs to Lungs, "Yes, you're ill, and I pity you, but then it's nothing to me. I'm getting along all right."

Said Athletics to Debating, "See how vigorous and strong I am. You ought to brace up. Though, of course, it really makes no difference to me."

By and by Lungs died, and Legs when too late realized that they both belonged to the same corporate body, and that one could not be ill without weakening the other. Does Athletics realize that it and Debating belong to the same corporate body Allegheniensis, and that if one part of the body flourishes strong and vigorous while the other is weak and feeble, that the body is hugely mishapen and abnormal?

It is the business of Legs to conserve the interests of Lungs, and the business of Lungs to provide for the comforts of Legs.

Time after time has Debating filled some yawning chasm with its gold that Athletics might cross over to victory. Athletics now must give its support to Debating if there is to be at all equilibrium of effort.

Exchange Department

A very neat, large and well-edited monthly comes to our exchange table from the pupils of the Immaculate Conception Academy in San Francisco.

Kentucky has passed a law doing away with co-education in that state.

It has been decided by the authorities of the St. Louis Exposition to set aside the week of June 10-17 as Students' Week. On June 10-11 will occur the Olympic College championship athletic contest. The remainder of the week will be taken up by oratorical contests.

At Illinois College a plan is under consideration to give the editor of the weekly college paper four credits a term, and the editor of the Literary Monthly three credits per term.

There is a well written article in the "College Student" from Franklin and Marshall College on The Exchange Column and What Should Go into It. It contains some good suggestions.

The Senior class at Cornell has decided to give as a class memorial the sum of $10,000 to be turned over to the treasurer at the end of ten years. The sum will be raised by subscription among the members of the class, each one pledging himself to pay annually to the life secretary of the organization the sum of $2.50.

Arrangements will be made to rent and manage a house for the accommodations of Princeton men at the St. Louis Exposition.

Five Sophomores have been recently expelled from the University of Michigan for cutting the hair of Freshmen without their permission. So Sophomores take warning.

Good Words for American Schools.

One of the members of the Mosely commission, of England, which made a tour of a number of American educational institutions last fall, has been publishing in the Liverpool "Daily Post" a journal he kept during his visit under the general title of "Travel Notes in America." Speaking of Princeton, Mr. Rathbone, the member of the commission in question, said in part:

"This university is different from anything we have in England." After remarking on the general character and beauty of the campus and buildings, with which he was much impressed, he said he was especially pleased with the library.

"The libraries at American universities are much more used by the students than are those at the English universities, as the students do most of their work in the libraries, and not in their private rooms. The gymnasium and baths at Princeton are even more complete and magnificent than those at Lawrenceville. Athletics, physical training and games here are engaged in with the greatest intensity, which is so characteristic of the American people. For one coming from the old country it is almost impossible to realize the extent to which this intensity pervades all American life. Games and sports, for instance, lose all their recreative character; to the boy who takes them up they are a most serious business, requiring a most rigid and exacting course of training."

Mr. Rathbone said of football, the members of the commission witnessing the Carlisle-Princeton game: "A more dangerous game I have never seen. Rugby football as we play it is mere child's play beside it. How any player can go through a season of American football without injury is a mystery."

The cheering also attracted the attention of the commission, Mr. Rathbone remarking that "while the game was being played off all the other students were in a grand stand, firing off, at the signal of leaders, yells similar to those we heard at Lawrenceville. One knew the Americans were great organizers, but it was rather startling to hear even the applause organized in this way. In our visits to the various buildings we found every department well provided for. In the evening of October 18 I dined with one of the students at his club. The dinner was exceedingly simple, and no intoxicating liquors were allowed, the students drinking nothing but water, milk or lemonade. In the hotel last evening I had an interesting conversation with a Chicago dry goods merchant. He assured me that he always took university graduates into his office when he could get them, and that although he read science when at college, with the idea that he would become a doctor, he found his college training had been of the greatest value to him. Since I have come to this country I have frequently heard the same kind of thing said by business men occupying high and responsible positions. The affection and loyalty of the graduates to their university is a very marked feature of American university life. At this, as at every American university, there are a number of students who are supporting themselves by the money they earn during the vacations and while they are at college. I was assured that the students who are thus supporting themselves, or assisting in supporting themselves, are not placed in any different social position by the other students, but are received on terms of perfect equality."

ESAU BUCK AND THE BUCKSAW.

The Bucksaw, the Seesaw and the Buck That Saw Esau Saw—A Weird Tale.

An old farmer of Arkansas whose sons had all grown up and left him, hired a young man by the name of Esau Buck to help him on his farm. On the evening of the first day they hauled up a small load of poles for wood and unloaded them between the garden and the barnyard.

The next morning the old man said to the hired man: "Esau, I am going to town today and while I am gone you may saw up that wood and keep the old ram out of the garden."

When the old man had gone Esau went out to saw the wood, but when he saw the saw he wouldn't saw it. When Esau saw the saw he saw that he couldn't saw it with that saw. Esau looked around for another saw, but that was the only saw he saw, so he didn't saw it. When the old man came home he says to Esau: "Esau, did you saw the wood?" Esau said: "I saw the wood, but I wouldn't saw it; for when I saw the saw I saw that I couldn't saw with that saw, so I didn't saw it." The old man went out to see the saw and when he saw the saw he saw that Esau couldn't saw with that saw. When Esau saw that the old man saw that he couldn't saw with the saw Esau picked up the ax and chopped up the wood and made a seesaw. The next day the old man went to town and bought a new bucksaw for Esau Buck, and when he came home he hung the bucksaw for Esau on the sawbuck by the seesaw.

Just at this time Esau Buck saw the old buck in the garden eating cabbage, and when driving him from the garden to the barnyard Esau Buck saw the bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw, and Esau stopped to examine the new bucksaw. Now, when the old buck saw Esau Buck looking at the new bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw, he made a dive for Esau, missed Esau, hit the seesaw, knocked the seesaw against Esau Buck, who fell on the bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw. Now, when the old man saw the old buck dive at Esau Buck and miss Esau and hit the seesaw and knock the seesaw against Esau, and Esau Buck fall on the bucksaw on the sawbuck by the seesaw, he picked up the ax to kill the old buck, but the buck saw him coming and dodged the blow and countered on the old man's stomach, knocked the old man over the seesaw onto Esau Buck, who was getting up with the bucksaw off the sawbuck by the seesaw, crippled Esau Buck, broke the bucksaw and sawbuck and the seesaw.

Now, when the old buck saw the completeness of his victory over the old man and Esau Buck and the bucksaw and the sawbuck and the seesaw, he quietly turned around, went back and jumped into the garden again and ate up what was left of the old man's cabbages.

The Thiel College case will be tried in the Supreme Court at Philadelphia on the week beginning May 9.

BAN ON ROMANCE IN MIDWAY FACULTY.

University of Chicago Trustees Interfere in Two Instructors' Love Affair.

Does the board of trustees of the University of Chicago object to faculty love affairs, and do the men who help Dr. Harper shape the destinies of the Midway school intend to settle to suit their own pleasure the romances which grow up in a co-educational faculty?

The latest actions of the board of trustees would seem to suggest an affirmative answer to these questions.

Professor John Matthews Manley, head of the department of English in the university, and Miss Lisi Cipriani, daughter of an Italian Count of Florence, Italy, member of the Romance faculty, became engaged a year ago. Later the rumor was spread that the engagement had been broken. This rumor was denied by Miss Cipriani, while Dr. Manley steadily refused to discuss it.

Trustees Interfere in Romance.

Recently it has been rumored the marriage is soon to take place, but the trustees, it is said, have entered unexpectedly into the last chapter of the story and have concluded it after a summary fashion of their own.

The board of trustees, it is said, will dispose of the hero and heroine as it sees fit, apparently without consulting the feelings or hopes of either, and the romance may not end in the traditional "lived happily ever afterward" fashion.

In fact, the "powers" seem to have decided that Miss Cipriani and Dr. Manley should not wed, that they will be better off and the university will be better off if they are not allowed to keep the troth they pledged a year ago.

Given Long Leave of Absence.

Accordingly Miss Cipriani has been granted a two years' leave of absence. She is now in Florence. Dr. Manley has also been granted a long vacation. He is resting at Lake Geneva.

At the last convocation President Harper announced that Miss Cipriani had been promoted to an assistant professorship. Among members of the faculty, however, it is current gossip that his promotion was made as a "blind" to hide the real desires of the university officers and to give them better excuse for asking Miss Cipriani to take an extended vacation "on full salary."

Dr. Manley's close friends have always objected to his engagement to Miss Cipriani, and have worked to have it broken off. It is said the engagement was hastened by the fact that President Harper advised Professor Manley to "get married and settle down."

Dr. Manley's Friends Object.

Dr. Manley's friends, however, have been unwilling to have the proposed marriage with Miss Cipriani take place, and they have made startling statements against the talented Italian in the course of the bitter affair.

They have gone so far as to insinuate that the engagement was not really of Dr. Manley's seeking, that he "was taken advantage of." Miss Cipriani's friends, on the other hand, declare these accusations to be unfounded and prompted by enmity and spite.

Now members of the faculty say that since the affair would not settle itself, but was making trouble in the faculty, the university authorities have decided to settle the quarrels brought on by Dan Cupid. Accordingly Professor Manley is in Lake Geneva. Miss Cipriani is in Florence, Italy. Both are on long leave of absence.

A Hindoo Letter.

The ways of the Hindoo mind are past finding out. A gentleman who has traveled extensively in India relates many stories and incidents relative to Hindoo eccentricities. Among them is the following.

A young high caste native of the Madras Presidency was attending the University of Calcutta. While there he saw and loved from afar off the daughter of a prominent English gentleman of Calcutta. The reader may imagine the emotions of the father upon receiving a letter from the ardent suitor. The letter is given verbatim.

To Babu Kollychurn Ghose.

Ghose paternal Father of Miss Kaanning.

Dear Sir:

It is with a faltering penmanship that I write to have communication with you about the prospective condition of your damsel offspring.

Some remote time to past a secret passion was firing my bosom internally with loving for your daughter. I have navigated every channel in the magnitude of my extensive jurisdiction to cruelly smother the growing love knot that is being constructed in my withinside. But the timid lamp of affection trimmed by Cupid's productive hands still nourishes my love-sickened heart. Needless would it be for me to extemporize the great conflagration that has been generated in my heart and head. During the region of nightness my intellectual cranium has been entangled in thoughtful attitude after my beloved consort.

Nocturnal slumberlessness has been the infirmity which has besieged my now degenerate constitution. My educational capacities have abandoned me and here I now cling to those lovely long tresses of your much coveted daughter like a mariner shipwrecked on the rock of love. As to my scholastic calibre I was recently ejected from Calcutta University. I am now rustivating and will make a motion as soon as I perceive in the business of life a little laxness.

I am of a lofty and original lineage and of independant incomes and hoping that having debated this proposition in your pregnant mind you will concordantly corroborate in espousing your female progeny to my tender bosom and thereby acquire me into your family circle as

Your dutiful son-in-law.

Moti Lal.

GOOD TENNIS WEATHER.

The Muse of the Racquet Woes the Man With the Pencil.

"Thirty-fifteen! Serve! Thwack! A little too swift for me."

The sun shone warm and clear Monday morning and the tennis player with dreams of future championships girded his loins and hied him to the court. Such words and sounds as the above could be heard on the campus by the casual stroller. They seemed perfectly in place with the singing birds, the bursting buds and the warm, damp smell of the earth.

Yes the classic game in with us again and we are glad. The elusive balls are flashing through the air. The players' brows are beaded with perspiration but nevertheless the tennis devotees are in peace and harmony with the world. Who would mope and worry when the requets are twanging? Who would be a Horace and sleep indoors while Marcenias sports in the sunshine?

The professor with half the alphabet folowing his name was playing rather a worse game than usual. His opponent was a big framed young fellow who had flunked out under the professor in the winter term. The game was close and sharply contested on both sides. The young fellow was serving. He placed one just past the good doctor's reach.

"Vantage in," called the umpire. The young fellow dropped another one over the net and the professor returned it cleverly.

"Doctor," called a voice from the sidewalk, "I would like to consult you for a few moments about my original research work."

The doctor glanced out and saw one of the star grinds and students of the college.

"Sorry," he replied as he smashed a hot one. "Haven't got time now. Ha, that makes it deuce again. Come around this—. A pretty one. Come around this evening to my room."

"Vantage out," said the umpire.

When the star digger turned the corner he heard

"Game."

The doctor had won.

"That makes it 2-1 in your favor," he said to the young fellow. "Say that's a dandy stroke you give on your return. If you would teach it to me—"

"Sure" said the young fellow who had flunked in the winter term and presently they were both engaged in practicing the new stroke.

This classic game of tennis is a great revolutionary force. It determines a new aristocracy. But then who would stay indoors and sleep when the court gleams white through the trees?

"When all my thoughts in vain are thunk,

When all my winks in vain are wunk, What saves me from a rocky flunk? My Poney."
