Mr. L. W. Barnard,
American Bible Society,
Bible House, City.

My dear Mr. Barnard:

In your story of "Abraham Lincoln's Bible", which you sent me at the time it was released for the press, you say that the book was one of the "cheap little Bibles imported from England by vote of the American Congress in 1777." Have you at the Bible Society a copy of these Bibles, or any information on the way that they were distributed. Have you, or anyone else written anything on the matter? I should like to see the book.

I hope I am not troubling you with these requests, but you were good enough to say in a former letter that you would be willing to aid me in any way you could. I am at the moment at work on a Boys' Life of Lincoln, and I should like to tell a little more of the Bible than is customary in biographies.

As to the electro which you said you could get for us, I will turn that matter over to the Magazine and they can arrange when the time comes.

Very truly yours,
