Dear Miss Moffett:

I must seem to you one of those unreliable persons who promised easily and as easily forgets. But this is what happened. Just after I saw you - the next morning I think - I went away for two weeks. I meant to take with me yours and Mr. Burnett's address and did not do it. I am only just back and now after a delay for which I apologize I am sending you the note of introduction. I hope it will bring you the work you seek.

With all good wishes

Very sincerely yours
