

Reynolds 32

Talked with Reynolds about possible work - April 13th.

He had been to see Graeve and explained why the Travel article has not been sent in. Talk to him about a possible article on the family in times of depression.

Also talked of the possibility of an article on the relation between the movement for what is called the economic freedom of women and the present depression. The idea being that the movement has resulted in ~~the~~ kind of technological unemployment problem. This is an awkward putting but it was merely suggesting than any completed outline. I told him I was not ready to talk seriously about this.

Spoke to him about the autobiography - told him that I had been approached by at least three different women within the last two years who wanted to write my life, that I had no intention of allowing anybody to do it, that as a matter of protection I wanted to say that I have already talked with Reynolds about an autobiography and that I had no plans for doing it now. If I did it it would put the biography out of the running and ^{he}/would handle the manuscript. I explained to him carefully that this is really a protective measure and that I did not have any serious notion of ever writing my life.