Dear Mr. Weeks:

I have been away from New York for a fortnight and returning find your letter of October 18th with the manuscript of my Recollections. Both have been acknowledged I understand.

I appreciate the care that you have given to my manuscript. As I think I wrote you when I sent the first installment ~~that~~ I did not consider it a finished piece of work by any means. The later chapters sent needed I realized considerable drubbing. That is, I gave you a harder job than you would have had if I had done the work on the manuscript which I am hoping now to do. ce

The points you make against the stuff are all well taken and I am glad enough to have them. How much I can profit by them remains to be seen.

I do appreciate, dear Mr. Weeks, the trouble you have taken with what I have written.

Faithfully yours

Mr. Edward Weeks
