Dear Rutger:

Thank you for having taken the trouble to answer so promptly my inquiry about the relation of Appleton's and "Progress and Poverty." I am wondering if it was dropped from your catalogue because there was no longer sufficient sale to justify you in keeping it on.

I see by yesterday's Literary Supplement of The Times that you still publish Bellamy's "Equality." Could you without too much trouble tell me what the sales have been from 1897 on?

I have from Houghton-Mifflin Company the sales from "Looking backward." I should like those of "Equality." If I get them and use them, as I shall if I get them, I shall attach the distinguished name of your firm to the information!

Faithfully yours
