

January 23, 1925

Mrs. Florence Kelley,
156 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

My dear Mrs. Kelley:

I have your letter telling me of the dinner that the National Consumers' League is giving on January 29 for Dr. John R. Commons.

I wish I could be there, but I am afraid it is out of the question. I have an engagement for that evening, though if I find I can shift it, I will. I should very much like to hear the discussion.

I have never told you how much I enjoyed your dinner, dear Mrs. Kelley. I never attended one where there was so much genuine feeling for the person honored, and never one where I felt the person honored more richly deserved it.

Faithfully yours,
