Memo - Industrial Leaders

The restless indifference to the effect on general prosperity of the country shown in the case of men intent on making their own enterprises powerful and practicable, is in the curious contrast with the ^{high} ~~lead~~ of ~~his~~ devotion they ~~he~~ gave to the country when war came. All their resources were thrown ⁱⁿ to ^{so} pot, and they, themselves, gave their time most exclusively ^{to} the government's problem. It ~~was~~ true in many cases of men who in peace time ^{do} ~~were not~~ giving ^e the thought to the country at large, only to their own enterprises not seeing their enterprises in their true relation ^{to be wise} although they saw them that way in the tug of war.
