STUDENTS VOTE APOLOGY FOR REVIVAL DISTURBANCE

by John Chapman Urbaitis

Wednesday afternoon at an all-college assembly, Allegheny students voiced approval of an apology to the people who had come to the Monday evening revival meeting for "sincere religious purposes." President Pelletier and Ted Linn, ASG President, spoke to the student body.

Opening the meeting, President Pelletier recounted his view of the events of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. He had listened to many people and answered many, he said, in an attempt to determine exactly what had happened. Dr. Pelletier emphasized that an extremely unfavorable reaction had resulted from the actions of students, which he described as not those which "would be expected of a lady or a gentleman attending a similar event."

The President also stated that he felt we (the students) had "done a great deal to advance a type of religion with which many of us cannot agree." This was the very opposite of the purpose of the students attending the meeting. "We have appeared to be intolerant and bigoted," he said of the actions of the school.

Some answer seemed necessary to

Humbard Wants Apology

Rex Humbard replied to the College's apology almost immediately Wednesday. In a telephone tape recording, Mr. Humbard said he felt the disturbance Monday was planned, and that either the President, the Dean, the Chaplain, and the faculty, or the students authorized the plot.

If the professors are not responsible for the disturbance, Mr. Humbard feels that he should return, rent-free, to the field house. If this request is denied, he said he would consider the administration responsible for the disruption of his meeting; if he may return for another meeting at the College, he will consider that the students were responsible for the "plot."

Robert Murphy, public relations officer, said President Pelletier probably would reserve comment until Rev. Humbard contacted College officials.

the many calls and letters he had received, President Pelletier said. Most expressed a hurt, rather than an irate attitude. He expressed the hope that "we will be big enough to accept whatever responsibility we bear, partial though it may be, for the events of Monday evening . . ."

Ted Linn, ASG President, then read the prepared apology to the gathered students. The statement, as adopted, follows:

"Those of us who were in attendance at the meeting held in this field house Monday night feel that some of the behavior on the part of some of the students, carried on without malicious intent, may have hurt people who had come for sincere religious purposes. Although we cannot support the religious views expressed during the service, we realize that our actions were intolerant and wish to extend our apologies to those in attendance."

Several minutes were allowed for discussion of the statement. Some students stated that certain wordings were unclear. A change was made to make clear that the students apologize only to those in attendance, not to Mr. Humbard. Again a discussion followed, and in a few minutes a voice vote was taken. Enough students voted "Aye" to authorize officials to release the apology.

Rex Humbard, Revival Preacher Holds Meeting in Field House

by Sandy Spence

A revival service led by Mr. Rex Humbard, "Your T.V. Pastor," and the Weatherford Quartet from Akron, Ohio, attracted a capacity crowd to the David Mead Field House Monday night.

Dr. Allen B. Edwards, College Treasurer, has stated that the field house had been rented to a "quartet" and the college had no idea that a revival service would be held until an advertisement appeared in a local paper nine days prior to the date set for the rally. Knowing the possible student reaction to a program of this nature, Dr. Charles B. Ketcham, College Chaplain, called Mr. Humbard and requested him to find another building in which to hold the service. However, by this time the Cathedral organization had already made video tapes advertising the affair, and, according to Mr. Humbard, it would have cost his organization $1,500 to change these tapes.

Before the service, one student arrived at the Field House in a wheel chair, another came on crutches. Before and during the program students played cards, knit, studied, or sat watching and waiting. Signs appeared in one corner of the student audience with such remarks as "Oh, Lawd, I'm for Zen," "Hallelujah," "Barf," "Unfair to Organized Atheists," and "I'm a sinner. So what?" A "Shhh!" came up from the students when Mr. Humbard and the Quartet were ready to begin, and then an outburst of laughter. Mr. Humbard commented on his "Enthusiastic audience."

After a prelude of piano numbers and gospel songs, Mr. Humbard began a story of a leper whose suffering was a curse of God, a punishment for a life sin. Stating that there are more educational institutions today and there are more people in mental institutions, Mr. Humbard added, "Sickness is a product of the wrong way of living."

As Mr. Humbard continued a cross with fire crackers exploding from it was seen burning on a bluff outside the field house, a display mimicking Mr. Humbard's own use of fireworks for religious purposes. When the students began to laugh, Mr. Humbard commented that at any of his meetings, he had never witnessed any irreverence. "As a man lives, so shall he die," Mr. Humbard said, and told the story of the man from Akron who slipped off a bar stool and died. "This," declared Mr. Humbard, "is what sin brings." He continued, "there will be lives that will be different after this night. There may be a funeral on this campus within two weeks."

After Mr. Humbard prayed for members of the audience who had raised their hands, a large number of students walked out. Mr. Humbard ended his program saying, "If you are able to help our broadcast . . ."

As the audience began to leave, a woman ran up and spoke into the microphone, "I came sixteen miles and brought my children here, and I am thoroughly ashamed."

Outside, in the lobby, a man stood beside stacks of cardboard buckets which he stated had been brought to collect the offering. Motioning toward the approximately 100 empty buckets, he stated, "This is your offering," and he refused to give away one of the pamphlets that had been brought to be distributed to the audience. (Later the pamphlets were distributed to those who remained.)

Inside, Mr. Humbard remained on the platform greeting the enraged townspeople, autographing their Bibles, and saying "God bless you" as they handed him their money.

Speaking to college students, Mr. Humbard asked, "Why is their not religious reverence in the United States, and why do we not have freedom of worship?" He stated that he was invited here by the citizens of Meadville, naming Mr. Elwood Holt, the manager of a local skating rink, as the man who was responsible.

Mr. Humbard told about his "Cathedral of Tomorrow" in Akron, Ohio. The building seats 7,500 people and there are Sunday school classrooms for 4,000, which, Mr. Humbard stated, are used during the week by the public schools. In An all-school average of 78.44, the highest first semester average since 1945, was attained last semester. Another change was the 80.95 average of the freshman women. This was higher than both the sophomore women's and the all-women's average.

Alpha Gamma Delta's average for the 14th consecutive semester was the highest of the sororities, while the Phi Kappa Psi's led the fraternities.

The percentage of people having A averages was the highest since 1956-57, and 14.3% of the students were on Dean's list.

Dr. Pelletier should be commended for permitting the students to reword the public apology. Releasing a statement with which he personally disagreed but which was sanctioned by the majority was an admirable act of tolerance.

Campus Editor:

The following represents that which I have learned in the last four days, through questioning my own ideas and beliefs, and discussing with Dr. Ketcham, Dean McKean, President Pelletier, and numerous other members of the faculty and student body of Allegheny College, their beliefs:

1. That the basic freedoms of speech and religious belief inspired by the Christian religion and guaranteed to all citizens by the constitution of the United States Government, are valid and innate rights of all such citizens.

2. That to jeopardize, knowingly or unknowingly by my actions (direct or suggestive), or by my support of, or condonement of, any action taken by others, which is in opposition either actively or passively, to the right of any individual to speak freely and without interference (regardless of his suspected motives) to those who wish to listen to him; or the right of any individual to believe in any spirit, idea, object, or other thing, which he may see fit to believe in, and to worship in any manner which he chooses, in so long as that manner of worship does not in any way, other than that of example, force or compel others to believe in or worship in like manner; is to break the laws of the United States and the moral Doctrines exemplified in the life of Christ Jesus. And to place myself in opposition to these laws and the fundamental ideas and beliefs which lie behind them.

3. That the end or goal of any proposed, be it good, bad, or indifferent, does not in any way, or under any circumstances, justify the means or methods used to attain that end.

4. That in order to insure for myself the right to speak or worship (subject to the conditions set forth above), I must respect and protect the right of all others to do likewise, in accordance with same provisions.

5. That in accordance with the constituted laws of the United States I possess the right to determine and judge in my own mind the actions of others, but do not in any manner or fashion possess the right to enforce such determinations or judgments upon any other, except through use of the duly constituted processes of law of the government of the United States or its duly recognized representatives, (i.e. states, counties, townships, etc.)

6. That although another may break the provisions of the aforementioned laws and cause me personal injustice, I can not, without abandoning my support, belief, and respect for these laws, do likewise unto him.

7. That to retain my own self respect, I must, subject to the aforementioned legal provisions of my country and my own personal beliefs, act in accordance with these legal provisions and personal beliefs.

8. That as a human being, there is no right, which in any way grants me the right to jeopardize or in any way infringe, upon the innate rights of any other.

9. That by, in any way, jeopardizing or violating these 9 statements of conviction, I destroy my personal integrity, and bring shame and justified wrath upon myself, my co-workers, and all those communities, institutions, ideas, and beliefs, with which I am or have been associated.

Sincerely,
Douglas R. Ewing

To the Editor:

Last Monday night's performance in the Field House has won the Allegheny community considerable and unfavorable publicity — which is not entirely unjustified. To say that the renting out of a building was an unfortunate mistake made unwittingly by the college is the understatement of the week. It was done apparently on false pretenses perhaps with, but possibly without, the direct knowledge of Mr. Humbard, who may or may not be a sincere fundamentalist or Charlatanic opportunist. This is in a sense irrelevant to the conduct of the students who attended. Those, if any, who went in sincere silent protest against a disgusting perversion of the Christian faith may have been proper. But those who went for derivative entertainment to mock the people, deluded though they may be, who our "circus" was an expression of actual religious quest, presented a display as revolting as the "scheduled feature". The means-to-a-material-end-pseudo-religion presented by Mr. Humbard and Company should be heartily opposed in sermons, class discussions, and bull sessions by anyone to whom religion as a source of ultimate value has real or potential significance. But the jeering, sign-waving, cross-burning response presented not a valid rejection of a religious perversion, but rather an insensitive disregard for the rights of a minority to free expression of worship and tolerance for their beliefs, disgusting as that expression and belief may be. Those of us students — and faculty — who by our attitudes helped encourage the response given no doubt share in the guilt for a most unhappy affair. The stunts we joked about beforehand look in retrospect more tragic than cute.

To the Faculty and Student Body:

Are you proud to be an Allegheny student after what happened at the revival meeting Monday evening, February 22, in the David Mead Fieldhouse.

For the first time since some of us have entered Allegheny College, we are not proud to be associated with this institution of higher learning. The reason for this is the uncouth demonstration put on by a minority of Allegheny's student body at the revival meeting. But the entire fault does not lie with the student body.

At the Monday evening meal, green slips of paper were passed out to those students who ate in Brooks dining hall, saying:

"The suggestion has been made by a number of faculty members that as many students as possible go to the program of Rex Humbard this evening. It is hoped that most of the seats will be occupied by dignified college students. It is important that the students go early for seats. The program starts at 7:30.

"A number of the faculty have expressed considerable displeasure with the means Mr. Humbard used to obtain the Field House and believe that silence will be the most effective means of expressing this displeasure."

Certainly the more intelligent members of the faculty could not expect the Allegheny student body to passively resist Rex Humbard's evangelistic service when some of the faculty implied that resistance would be condoned. There is a saying that goes "give them an inch and they'll take a mile."

This country has as one of its basic heritages, the freedom and tolerance of religion. As citizens of this country and persons fortunate to be able to live and visit in a country with this freedom, the student body of this Christian college and several prominent people connected with this college did not live up to one of the unwritten laws of the land when some of their members burned a cross and held up signs of derogatory comments such as "Bull roar; hallelujah (sarcastically meant); "nuts" and other epithets. This unwritten law is the freedom of expression and right to be heard by those who desire to hear.

Since this is a free country, those people who did not wish to listen to him had the privilege to leave instead of staying and mock him to the consternation of those who really had a desire to hear his words. Many of those who went did not leave because they had no backbone to stand the ridicule of their fellow students if they followed their beliefs.

Robert Browning once said, "one religion is as true as another." As a Christian college which supposedly has a high standard and is reputed to turn out good citizens, Allegheny has surely, in this instance, failed in its attempt to make its ideals come true.

No matter how Rex Humbard got in here, by hook or by crook, "two wrongs never make a right."

Regretfully,

Robert Cornell

Dear Editor:

This letter is not written in protest to the college reaction to Monday night's Field House performance. Rather this letter is inspired by my observation that this performance was a perfect example of an attitude that pervades the campus — a spirit of negativism.

What do I mean by negativism? This to me is the spirit of rebellion, rejection, and opposition simply as an end in itself. Rebellion and opposition as a means to a positive end are a necessity and thus this is not what I am concerned about. However, What I am questioning is the sincerity of those members of the college community who thrive on opposition itself. These people are always ready to show their rebellious spirit whether it be in opposition to national scholarships that require a loyalty oath or opposition to a revival meeting. Such opposition they believe to be the role of the intelligentsia which of course includes themselves. No free thinker can uphold a scholarship program that requires the recipient to swear that he is not a Communist or no rational person can sanction a performer who plays entirely upon the emotions. This, at least, is what is commonly heard on the campus.

My purpose is not to express an opinion for or against these issues. Furthermore I will make it clear that I am not supporting Monday night revival meetings! My purpose, however, is to question the sincerity of one of the arguments that I have heard in favor of Monday night's organized opposition. To those of you who say such a meeting as that of Monday night ought to be opposed because it is not in line with the school's or your own intellectual ideals, I wish to pose a question. How many of you that can so strongly condemn the non-intellectual approach of Mr. Humbard actually took the time to listen to a legitimate theologian like Karl Michaelson when he appeared on the campus? Again, I am not expressing an opinion either for or against Mr. Michaelson. My question is addressed only to those of you that are so ready to oppose the non-intellectual, yet have no positive ground of your own to stand upon.

Possibly the spirit shown Monday night is the school spirit that some students are so often concerned about — if it is I am glad that it has been found and hope only that it can also be channeled in a positive direction. If, however, this negativism is school spirit, I can only be thankful that I am apathetic!

Sincerely,
Gary Bergh

Letter to Editor:

Monday night's demonstration at the David Mead Field House was unfortunate. Publicity from such an instance tends to be distorted far out of proportion, landsliding unnecessarily to the bottom of an infamous chasm of irrationality. In its wake is a swarth of misproportioned halftruths and disparaging lies.

If Monday night's speaker were the religious figure he claimed to be, he truly was done an injustice; but if he were just a religious demagogue, then and ingenious exploitation in the Allegheny student body has led the speaker into a more hallowed light of martyrdom than he justly deserves.

Those who know—or think they know—the alluded-to facts underlying the situation can sympathize with the student body's feelings, without having to agree with or condone their method of expressing discontent with the situation.

At the same time those who do not know the sentiment of the student body—(kindled by facts about the speaker)—have to listen to or read second-hand stories which strain more of the remaining shreds of truth from the story with each repetition.

I do not believe the question in dispute is religious tolerance or intolerance. The integrity of the speaker's intentions and his religious sincerity have yet to be determined.

Dear Editor:

Are we just a "holy little huddle" off in our own corner, serving no one, reaching no one? What kind of job are we doing? These perhaps were the questions of concern put before Mr. Remund Sandmann, State YMCA Staff Advisor, last week by the Allegheny Christian Fellowship as Mr. Sandmann conducted an evaluation of the Fellowship group.

This evaluation involved interviews with various faculty members and students, as well as a self-evaluating by an A.C.F. committee. It was climaxed on Wednesday evening with an open report session.

To those who participated in the interviews, we express our sincere thanks. To them and to the campus, we would like to say that we feel the evaluation worthwhile in effectively moving the total religious activity forward on campus.

We realize we have not been serving you, but with your help we shall try. Some concrete steps have been taken already. One committee is at work creating a workable constitution, while another is exploring the possibilities of establishing an Advisory Board, which would include faculty, community ministers and community "Y" personnel.

Our big advance, we hope, will be in the area of programming. The type of association we want to be is not just a "Sunday night meeting group" — for rightfully we should be working to meet various needs by other program groups, including such as our service projects like the Bethesda teachers, study groups on faith, politics, marriage, and others, and even a social action group. This will take work and we ask your help. Continue to share your criticisms and also your desires — let us know your interests.

Thanks again to all who participated and to the campus for challenging us to move forward to a greater outreach.

Cordially,
Jackie Kovacevic
A.C.F. President

P.S. A group of our international students will be sharing in a panel discussion this coming Sunday. It will be a chance for us to gain insight into the particular problems of their country and their fellow students there. We hope those who have interests in this area will feel welcome!!!

To the Editor:

At Allegheny College one snowy winter night

Rev. Humbard came to tell us of our sorry plight.

He entered the gymnasium, black hair greased down slick,

Looking like a '30 gangster, ready for his pick.

His quartet sang some songs to us, of Holy-Roller fame

And I bet they thought that we would never be the same.

For their efforts, not one hand was raised for applause or clap.

I wonder if they thought that they were at the wrong place on the map.

The Rev. then proceeded to speak to us of sin,

But not one black heart opened for him to enter in.

There was no wine nor white sheets, the students were, you see,

Too overcome by Rex and his importance to you and me.

A cross was burning on the hill, I admit it was in bad taste,

But yet it proved the meeting was not a total waste.

The papers and the radio enlarged the cross you see

And it was carried by every student, even Betsy and me.

The Rev. now is famous and a martyr to the world;

His fame is now noted and his banner is unfurled.

Letter to Editor:

The evangelical meeting held by the Rev. Rex Humbard last Monday night has now become a part of the history of Allegheny College. It would be best for all concerned to have the incidents which occurred that night forgotten.

Some people, however, seem to be doing their best to keep them alive. Because of this we would like to make the viewpoints of some of the students of this campus known.

As has already been stated, the student body wishes to accept all responsibility for its actions. Although several groups of students were required to attend the meeting (Continued on Page 3)

Men Can Now Apply For Counselor Positions For Fall; Standards Set

by Merrill Elias and David McKay

Applications for positions as men student counselors for the next academic year are being accepted between now and Friday, March 4, and candidates will be considered for this important service and honor.

The student counseling program offers outstanding upperclass students the experience of helping freshmen develop responsible participation in college academic and social life. Working closely with Dr. William P. Wharton, Director of the Counseling Center, and Dean of Students, John R. O. McKean, the counselors help the freshmen to meet their new experiences in college successfully and to gain a sense of self-direction, sound educational goals and perspectives, and the ability to cope with new personal situations.

The fact that the counselors themselves decide the policies of the system and how to meet situations which arise in the dormitory points to the necessarily high criteria maintained in selected new counselors. The student entering counseling may expect to gain insight into personality and group psychology and to have an enjoyable and educational experience. His motivation, as well as his primary loyalty, should lie in helping the freshmen, rather than in his own profit; without this sense of service, coupled with an interest in the functioning of human personality, the time and interest demanded by counseling can make the experience wearing rather than enjoyable. Since the counselor will be called upon to help freshmen develop sound study habits and interest in intellectual activities, it is important that he himself be a sincere student. Thus applicants should have strong academic orientation and a cumulative average of 80 or higher; only in exceptional circumstances would this criterion be waived. The prospective counselor should have clear thoughts on his own personal values and at the same time be tolerant of the views of others and able to stimulate discussion without imposing his personal opinions. He should also have taken some substantial part in campus activities, so as to have a breadth of experience from which to advise freshmen.

Application forms are available from any of the present student counselors or the Counseling Center, Bentley Hall. They should be completed and returned to the Counseling Center by Friday, March 4. After that, the applicants will be discussed and evaluated by the present counselors who will make the selection. The official appointments are made by the Director of Counseling and the Dean of Students and will probably be announced in the early part of April. The counselors are considered a part of the personnel staff of the college and receive a token reimbursement of one-half their room rent in the dormitory.

After selection, the new counselors will take part in a training program under the direction of Dr. Wharton where typical problem situations and counseling techniques are discussed. The counselors continue to meet every few weeks during the college year to share ideas on both collective and individual problems.

A high proportion of present and past student counselors have been leaders in student government and other campus activities and have found counseling to be a unique service and educational activity which the count among their most valued campus experiences.

'Foreign Language Fun' Presented Tues., Mar 1

This Tuesday, March 1, students of the Modern Language Department will present a program entitled "Foreign Language Fun." The performance will be held in the Playshop at 7:30 p.m. and everyone—language student or not—is cordially invited.

There will be a variety of acts in which each of the languages taught at Allegheny will be represented. First of all, the German students will present scenes from Lessing's 18th century comedy, "Minna Von Barnhelm." Then there will be a few Russian songs, followed by the Spanish department's one-act play, "Vamonos." Russian dancing will be next on the program, with the remaining feature being the French students' scenes from "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," a 17th century comedy. This act includes not only spoken lines but also a ballet scene.

Miss Blair Hanson, chairman of the Modern Language Department, declared that in the past student reaction has been enthusiastic and that this year's performance should be no exception. The purpose of the program is to show that students can have fun with a foreign language, that is not all "Just Verbs."

By the way, for those who have thus far escaped the G-3 requirement and feel that they would be lost at such a performance, don't worry. Come anyway—there will also be an English-speaking narrator to explain each act beforehand!

Pins and Sins

Seems as though Cupid is not so stupid after all — just yours truly. We congratulate Ann Tannehill and Ed McKean on their recent engagement, which took place the Saturday before Valentine's Day.

Belated congratulations are also in order for Marylee Bast who is wearing the Phi Gam pin of Joe O'Neill.

Not too many sins have been committed lately. It could be that Mr. Rex Humbard did have a profound influence on this student body. Incidentally did you know that Allegheny has three thousand students? This "accurate" population count was given on a KDKA news-broadcast recently.

Aside to Mr. Humbard — You said you were gonna have a good time the other evening. Did you?

Marian Riley, why can't you close the front door of Tarbell gently? I guess you and Beth Sutherland have learned your lessons. After all the glass in that door is breakable! Think of the futility the janitor is going through; no sooner does he place a new pane in the door, than it is broken.

To prove that dormitory life is very similar to communal life, we city the following. The girls on the first floor of Section I in Caf-lisch have a pool on pin-curlers. So sincere are they in this endeavor that Jan Senkowitz volunteered to get up at 6:00 a.m. on a Sunday morning just so Jeanne Monnoyer could use the curlers which Jan had. Now we understand why your hair was so straight that Sunday, Jeanne.

A prediction of things to come—Since it didn't snow for the Winter Carnival, you can be sure it wil for May Day.

as a part of their course work, the students wish to make clear that no professor or groups of professors were responsible for any of the overt actions which occurred at the meeting.

The majority of the students had made no plans previous to the meeting. That the student body was in mental and emotional accord was clearly evidenced by the actions which did take place. The causes of the student body's actions seem to be three-fold: First, it was and is believed by the students that the use of the David Mead Field House by Rev. Humbard had not been obtained in the usual manner. This caused a rise of feeling previous to the commencement of the meeting.

The actions of the students, while largely inexcusable, probably would not have occurred if it had not been for the intellectually antagonistic attitude of Rev. Humbard. The weak correlation between academic and mental "institutes" as well as the position of the rich or educated man as the wicked sinner and the poor or uneducated mas as the faithful believer in the stories told by Rev. Humbard left little sympathy in the minds of the college audience.

In conclusion, after the sermon and the prayer, the student body left in an orderly fashion, and there was no evidence that there would have been any objection or obstruction if the Rev. Rex Humbard had wished to continue his services.

We realize that this does not excuse some of the actions of the students, but it does partially explain them. We were not directing criticism at God or Christianity, but rather at the method of presentation Rev. Humbard used. We believe that God, not the Church, is absolute; for the Church, being composed of men, contains the faults of man as well as his virtues. Criticism of the Church has proved in the past to be healthy, and freedom of expression, just as freedom of religion, is a part of our American heritage.

To the Editor:

In regard to the recent unfortunate visit of the (Rev.) Rex Humbard I think the following might serve as an epigram to that visit. Amidst the arguing and false reports let us remember his stirring message.

I sing the praises of a man called Rex,
Who came to spread God's word.
Sinners laughed with mirth complex,
And he went unheard.
But first in voice which betrayed emotion,
He gave a parting blow.
You will repent this lack of devotion,
Soon one here will go.
Within two weeks the pearly gates will turn away a soul.
Beware the Lord's wrath in great,
The bell of death will toll.
Will you the heavens rate?
So to you then Rex I dedicate,
These words I think are true.
Search your soul it's getting late,
That person may be you!

Very sincerely,
Gary D. Voigt

Thank you, friends, that was my "Magical Appearance" stunt — For my next trick I will shed one tear and, with your help, transform all of you into a bunch of damn fools.

Gators Lose to W&J; Defeat Bethany

Allegheny's basketball team winning and losing in PAC competition the past week find themselves in sixth place in the Conference with a 3 and 5 record.

The Gators upset third place Bethany 70 to 67 Saturday and succumbed the Washington and Jefferson Wednesday by a score of 71 to 55.

Jim Johnston, who seems always to play exceptionally against Bethany, hit for 29 points doing most of the offensive damage to the Bisons. Sykes Reed chipped in 16 points and rebounded well off both offensive and defensive boards.

Allegheny who led by 7 points at half time and 16 points with 6 minutes to go had their hands full in suppressing the late Bison rally but held on, winning by 3 points.

Allegheny was completely outclassed by W & J the second half while they scored only 5 field goals as compared to W & J's 14. Vic

Kress and Sykes Reed fought aggressively under the boards pulling down practically all the Gator rebounds, but poorly taken shots, bad passing and general disorganization made the Gator defeat inevitable. Kress, Johnston and Reed led the Gator scoring with 15, 13 and 12 points.

Wrestlers Win; Tie In PAC Matches

The Allegheny wrestling team tied Washington & Jefferson 16-16 Wednesday in a PAC match.

On Saturday, the Gators won a close 15-14 victory over Case Tech at Cleveland.

Eben Jones, freshman 137 pounder decided the defending PAC 130 pound champion, Don Macko, 8-3 and Dick Dunn pinned the Rough Riders' Smith to provide the margin of victory.

PAC Tournament Held Here March 4-5

Allegheny wrestlers will be among 45 to 50 matmen competing for PAC titles in eight weight classes here March 4-5.

Allegheny, Case, Thiel, W & J, Wayne, and Western Reserve are entering enough men to compete for the team championship. Bethany will have one entrant.

Allegheny will have Dick Dunn, last year's 167-pound champion, in the 177-pound class, and Dave McChesney, runner-up at 137 pounds, back in action. Last year, Gator Grapplers piled up 67 points, mostly in the heavier weights, to win the tournament.

The Allegheny men started the year as heavy favorites, but injuries and the academic difficulties of present heavyweight Champ Bruce Olderman have brought their chances down on a par with the other teams.

Prelims start at 1:30 p.m. Friday. Elimination contests Friday evening and Saturday afternoon will decide who competes in the finals Saturday night.

Student passes and faculty complimentary tickets will not be honored at the event, but tickets will be sold them at half price: 50c for all of the sessions, 25c for a single session.

Swimmers Win 5th PAC Victory

Allegheny swimmers kept their PAC record clean by defeating W & J 50 to 45 at W & J Wednesday.

Bruce Carlile and John Gillespie sparked for the Gators. Carlile swam to a new pool record in the 200 yd. butterfly with a time of 2:22.2 and Gillespie scored firsts in the individual medley and back stroke and participated in Allegheny's winning 400 yd. medley relay team.

Coach William Hanson relieved the pressure on the young Gators towards the end of the meet. With the Allegheny swimmers leading 38 to 32 just before the ninth event, Hanson had his star swimmer, Carlile, enter the water, apparently in preparation for the 440 yd. free style. Actually Carlile wasn't entered in the event. The W & J coach reacted by pulling his star distance man, Joe Kern, from the race, saving his for the final relay. With Kern removed Speirs and Smith swam to an easy 1, 2 victory in the event virtually winning the meet before the final relay had taken place.

Senior Sketch

Ted Linn

Senior Ted Linn has been active in many aspects since he first came to our campus. As a freshman and sophomore he not only participated in the Thoburn and Tennis Clubs, but was class president for these years. He affiliated with the C.U. Board in his sophomore year continued into his junior year, when he took on the added duty of Vice President of Student Affairs. Among Ted's other activities have been membership in the Psychology Club and acting as a Student Counselor.

This year A.S.G. has, in him an excellent President. With respect to his role in this organization Ted had this to say:

"Students at Allegheny have assumed an important role in the educational process. In great part the student contribution to the educational community has been through student government organization and programming. The fact that we students have been effective in this way indicates the administration's confidence in allowing such freedom and reflects upon the maturity of our students. It is reassuring to have been a part of an educational community which is not compromising standards to accommodate the growing number of those seeking higher education. Allegheny's present and future exemplify the effectiveness of democratic education in which students, faculty, and administration co-operate in attempting to start an individual on the way to being an educated man."

The experiences which stand out in Ted's mind as adding greatly to his four years at Allegheny were his membership in Singers and his affiliation with the College Court. Ted expressed his views toward the College Court in this statement:

"I have found the Court to be somewhat frightening. You find yourself judging your peers, a difficult and often perplexing situation. All the members of the Court work together in an attempt to do not only what is best for the student involved, but also what will be most effective in continuing a standard for living in this unique society, the college community."

Ted feels he has profited by being a member of Singers for three years.

"Allegheny Singers will undoubtedly be a vivid memory to any of us who have had the opportunity to work under the direction of Dr. Morton Luvaas. To work together with the help and guidance of a man who commands respect and admiration in order to express yourself through a piece of music is of great satisfaction."

Ted Linn has certainly been active during his stay at Allegheny and has added much to the enthusiasm and stature of the student body. His membership in this student body will be long remembered.

Development Campaign Nears $2,500,000

by Ellen McKee

The year-old Allegheny Development Campaign is now approaching $2,500,000. "This is more money than has been raised in any previous campaign for funds, but it is only a beginning in the long-term development of Allegheny," explained Robert Sherman, head of the development campaign.

Of the $2,500,000 collected, $280,000 came from foundations, $294,000 from corporations outside of Meadville, and $285,648 from the Pittsburgh Area. From the Meadville Community, exclusive of the college students, $453,686 was raised — remarkable support from a town of its size and economic position.

Under the leadership of Peter Peterson, '59, the student phase of the campaign has so far totaled $200,504. "Student, faculty, administration, maintenance — in fact the college community as a whole — has backed the campaign very well," commented Mr. Sherman. The faculty gift (included within the Meadville Community figure) was $26,000.

On January 26, 1959, the campaign was started with a kick-off dinner. Under the chairmanship of Dr. Paul A. Siple, '32, over 10,000 alumni in 50 states and several foreign countries were contacted by close to 1,000 alumni volunteers. Throughout the year dinners were held in cities from Boston to California. These dinners not only helped to raise the $450,455 alumni donation but also enabled Alleghenians to become better acquainted with alumni in their area.

The money thus far collected has been used in these five areas:

1. Construction of a women's dormitory and dining hall underway but seriously hampered by the steel strike.
2. Establishment of the Andrew W. Robertson Chair of Economics by the Westinghouse Educational Foundation.
3. Establishment of the Arthur E. Braun Chair of Political Science by the Buhl Foundation.
3. Addition of over $2,000 in scholarship funds.
5. Half million dollar gift of Osian E. Carr, '00, for the eventual construction of a Science Building.

"I would like to emphasize that the campaign is not yet over," concluded Mr. Sherman. "Last spring was only the beginning, and we are now at about the midpoint. Our efforts during the remainder of 1960 will be devoted to seeking support for the college from industry, foundations, and special donors."

Survey Taken of Demand for Eighth Fraternity; Campus Opinion Divided

Allegheny College has had seven fraternities since 1917. Since then, however, the men's enrollment has doubled, but the size of the fraternities has not kept pace. Through the years, there has been more and more discussion over the need of an eighth fraternity. This question becomes much more poignant as the results of this year's Rush Week are studied.

Fifteen percent of those who signed up for Rush Week and were eligible to pledge were not taken by a fraternity, according to Interfraternity Council President Bob Williams. One hundred eighty signed up originally, but thirty were ineligible because they were on probation, and ten dropped out later, leaving 140 men, mostly freshmen, who wanted to pledge. One hundred eighteen were taken. Last year all who were eligible to join were taken, according to Bob. Dean McKean said that three or four students who were not accepted by a fraternity have approached him about transferring.

On the basis of these statistics, the Campus contacted fraternity leaders, campus leaders, and members of the administration to determine what the opinion of the campus was.

The seven fraternity presidents said: Mike Berta (Alpha Chi Rho) — "If there are enough men left over after rush week, the eighth fraternity might be needed. However, there are many problems to overcome, such as obtaining a house."

Nick Moraytis (Delta Tau Delta) — "I think another fraternity is needed. There are always many students wanting to go fraternity, who don't, and would like to join one."

Joe Greer (Phi Delta Theta) — "I don't think another fraternity would hurt the competition, but it's up to the administration. If they think the freshman class is large enough to support one, we would favor it, but in order to be prosperous, a fraternity should have from 45 to 50 members."

Dick Dunn (Phi Gamma Delta) — "There seems to be enough independents and freshmen who would like to have gone fraternity, to form an eighth one. This can succeed, however, only with the help of the Interfraternity Council and the backing of a strong national fraternity organization."

John Wheeler (Phi Kappa Psi) — "The Phi Psis would like to see another fraternity on campus when all seven are in good shape, although this may take several years."

Craig Forsgren (Sigma Alpha Epsilon) — "The fraternities on campus could operate at a fuller capacity. We would favor an eighth if there is a demand for it and if the administration thinks that it would have an equal chance to operate."

Tom Wakeman (Theta Chi) — "I believe that the present fraternities offer enough choice, and an eighth would be too many. It's the opinion of several members, however, that if an eighth were to come on the campus, it should be a strong one nationally — there's no room for a weak national."

A sampling of the opinions of a few independents is as follows: Dave Nellis — "I think there's a need for another co-op, I wouldn't say a fraternity. I think there are probably several independents who would join an eighth fraternity if one were started."

Buck Hemphill — "We have seven which need a change pretty badly before we get an eighth."

Lynne Moore — "I don't believe there should be any fraternities — that would solve the whole problem."

Mike Brunt — "As an independent fraternity man, I feel that there is a need for another fraternity. I've discussed the situation and there seems to be a genuine interest."

Lynna Sedlak — "It seems inevitable that in any selective system such as the fraternity system, a certain number of people will be hurt. If the addition of an eighth fraternity would alleviate this condition, it would certainly be advisable. However, I cannot see that extending this system can change or eliminate a problem inherent in it."

Three other campus leaders also stated their opinions: Ted Linn — (Student Government President) — "I don't think another fraternity is needed. It would be better to strengthen what we have. If, however, this year's trend of a lot of students left over after rush week continues, I would favor another fraternity."

Bobbie Heller (First Vice-President of AWS) — "Judging from the results of Rush Week, I think that the campus could use another fraternity. One is needed any way to provide living quarters for more men students."

Bob Williams (IFC President) — "I don't think that the present population of Allegheny warrants an eighth fraternity unless after the new dorm is completed the enrollment increases."

Both President Pelletier and Dean McKean believe that there should not be another fraternity until all seven are operating in full strength.

Calvin L. Crawford, director of admissions, and director of the College Union, stated: "We think that Allegheny can very well use another fraternity. We would like to see another national fraternity come to the campus."

Mr. Robert J. Sherman, Development Director and Assistant to the President, said: "On the basis of student numbers, I believe another is necessary. As long as we are going to have fraternities, I would like to see a sufficient number of them so that all students who wanted to join could do so."

A stumbling block for a new fraternity, however, comes in a statement adopted by the Board of Trustees in 1957 which says: "The Board is opposed to the establishment, at the college or by any group of students, of any new organization, which limits the selection of its members on the basis of race, creed, or religion."

Whether or not the Trustees would modify or repeal this statement on the basis of the low Negro enrollment or if their viewpoints have changed, cannot definitely be stated at this time, but it is said to be doubtful.

It seems, on the basis of this cross-section of the students, that a majority would favor the addition of another fraternity to the Allegheny community, although there are notable dissenters. Whether or not this will come to pass depends largely upon the need shown by the students.

Editor's note: The preceding article is not being published as an attempt on the part of the Campus to wage a campaign for the estab-

In order to dispel (or affirm) many of the nasty rumors about the way food is prepared at Brooks Hall, I decided to visit the kitchen myself. I assumed the role of impartial reporter to let you know the real reasons the food there is so crummy.

I started my tour in the Crud Room. This is where the dishes are washed. Well, maybe I was a little hasty with the word "washed." "Checked" would be closer. The prevailing rumor is that the dishes are merely stacked for re-use in the Crud Room. This, I am happy to report, is false. A man armed with a hose looks over the dirty ones and gives the really bad ones a squirt of water. The dishes are then run on trays through a machine spewing steam, which at first looked to me like a dishwasher. Looking inside, however, I discovered that the steam came from a small Gilbert hobby steam motor chugging inside. This was connected by a clever system of rubber bands to a fan, which served to at least partially dry the dishes before they were stacked.

Next I came to the huge ovens, which actually more closely resembled furnaces. The rumor that these were installed under the personal supervision of Charles Good-year and vulcanize rather than cook the meat is entirely false. The present ovens were imported from Germany shortly after the war, second-hand. This may explain the hairs we occasionally find in our meat.

I next passed a row of women sitting at a counter, each pressing paper-mache into pie tins with that loving personal care that only a woman can give. Passing on through the Dairy section, I was surprised to see the great number of cans of milk stored there, flanked by jars of potassium nitrate.

Apparently the FTV investigators hadn't heard of Brooks kitchen when they complained to a manufacturer who was using shaving cream instead of whipped cream in his commercials. This practice, as every frequenter of Brooks knows, is a common practice here.

After smiling at Miss Hanson, who was busily making the French dressing, I stopped to admire the huge soup vat, ten feet high and at least as wide. The roaring fire beneath it was being stoked with members of the cast of "The Lark" (at last poor Joan has been exonerated.) I ascended the ladder propped up against the vat and peered down in. The not-yet-watered-down soup, laughingly called vegetable, bubbled like the mud pools at Yellowstone. Suddenly a human hand reached slowly out of the debris floating on top and began to grope wildly in the air. At this point I concluded my inspection.

I suggest that you make an inspection (watch how wickedly I'm going to slip this in), of the newly-enlarged Wolff's hardware store. Make a note of all those little things (nails, light bulbs, etc.) that you need but never remember when you're downtown, and buy them all at Wolff's. Chances are you can get most of them in the one trip.

This week's motto is by Charles Irwin: If you accidentally leave you watch upstairs, it will run down.

lishment of an eighth fraternity at Allegheny. We hope it will be accepted as a presentation of various factors involved.

"Education Limited" Plans to Discuss Deprived Students

"Education Limited" is the title of CBS Radio's "The Hidden Revolution" series. This program to be broadcast at 8:20-9:00 p.m. EST on Tuesday March 8th will discuss the question of how students from culturally and economically deprived backgrounds can be helped to attain higher educational and vocational goals.

The focus will be on N.Y. City's Demonstration Guidance Project and a group of noted educators, economists and government officials will participate in the discussion. The D.G.P. is designed to help develop the talents of underprivileged students whose potentialities are often neglected in our education system. The radio program will also deal with scholarships and loan assistance of needy students continuing their education in college.

Projects similar to the one started in N.R. City have extended to Washington D.C., Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Syracuse; and 18 other major cities are either adopting or considering adoption of such projects. This system has also been studied by educators from other nations.

Participants in an analysis of the Demonstration Guidance project include: Dr. Eli Ginzberg, Director of the Conservation of Human Resources Project and Professor of Economics at the Graduate School of Business, Columbia University; Dr. J. Harold Goldthorpe, Specialist, Student Financial Assistance at the division of Higher Education, U.S. Office of Education; Dr. Carl F. Hansen, Superintendent of Schools, Washington, D.C.; Dr. Peter Muirhead, Director of Financial Aid, U.S. U.S. Office of Education; Richard L. Plaut, Executive Vice-Chairman, National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students; and Eugene Wilson, Dean of Admissions, Amherst College, Amherst, Mass.

"Education Limited" is produced for Unit One of the Public Affairs Department of CBS News. WGAR Cleveland will carry the program. Check Cleveland-Plain Dealer, in the library, for any change in time.

This week the PAC Wrestling Matches will be staged here at Allegheny College. The College Union has planned a dance in honor of our guests from the colleges participating in the PAC (they include Thiel, Washington and Jefferson, Case Institute, Wayne State, Western Reserve and Allegheny.)

On March 4th the Union is planning one of the biggest social events of the school year. A band will be playing almost continuously from 8:00 p.m. to 12 midnight. At intermission time the entertainment will include "The Innocents," Steve Frankel at the piano, and Chris Brown doing magic.

The entire college community is invited to spend the evening. The dress is informal and, well, for the girls, I guess the big attraction will be the wrestlers. If you go for that type of fellow, that is.

The two "Stereo" concerts this week promise to be most rewarding. Jeannette Harrington and Pete Jones (who set up the schedule) have turned the trick once again.

Sunday afternoon at 2:00 p.m. the Robert Shaw Chorale Album, "Deep River," will be heard. On Wednesday night selections of Wagner will be heard starting at 7:00 p.m. Among the selections that evening will be Lohengrin Preludes and Die Meistersinger Preludes.

This weekend marks the Carnival. Preparations will be going on beginning on Friday afternoon at the field house. The College Union will provide a get-together-dance starting at 9:00 p.m. Friday night. This record hop has been planned especially for those working on Carnival preparation and who want to take a break. Naturally, this is open to all, and refreshments will be served throughout the evening.

Take Note

Any senior planning to graduate in June 1960 must file a graduation card in the Registrar's Office by Wednesday, March 2.

addition to prayer meetings and evangelistic services at the Cathedral, Mr. Humbard has a large radio and television audience.

One student asked Mr. Humbard why he called his organization the Cathedral of Tomorrow. "What's wrong with today?" He answered that this was a figure of speech used to attract attention.

When questioned about his religious and educational background, Mr. Humbard stated that he had been ordained for 18 years, but he refused to name the organization which ordained him, saying only that it was an "affiliation of ministers." He stated that he studied in the "college of hard knocks and bumps." He stated that he was not a "faith healer" and that he had never met one.

When questioned about his prediction of a death on the campus within two weeks, Mr. Humbard said, "I can't explain it. It's between me and somebody else, but I don't have to explain it to anyone." He stated that he had made predictions before and claimed that his predictions came true "about three times."

After Mr. Humbard refused to answer several questions to the students' satisfaction, one student told him, "You don't give us anything to back up our faith in you." Mr. Humbard's reply was, "I'm not interested in you. I'm through."

Opinions of what had happened were varied. The townspeople made such comments as, "I thought it was horrible," and "I'll never give another donation to Allegheny College." A little boy named David said, "Mum, I would never want to go to this college." A woman who said she would rather stay home and hear Mr. Humbard on the radio than go to church added, "I always knew I didn't have much religion, but I never knew how bad it was till I saw these kids."

Student opinion ran along a different line. Many students felt that the actions of a few showed disrespect and lack of consideration for the religious beliefs of others. Other students took the opposite viewpoint. One person said, "I wish it wouldn't have been at the college and we could really have gone to town on him." Another student described the musical background in these terms, "... a barroom piano with a barroom beat — hardly in keeping with religion."
