

To Mrs. A. Day Robinson

December 6, 1909

Dear Aggie Day:

Mea culpa! - You know I never was an eager penswoman, and I have not advanced on that line! Truly tho! you have not heard from me because I thought somehow - here or there - to see and talk with you but after all I doubt that profit and pleasure forming till after the Holidays. Mrs. A. is absorbed by Xmas business and I shall scarcely see her till after the Candy tempest has passed.

No, it would be a vain effort to "outline" the book. In a way it is too complicated. Many things boiled down and packed in - "Personalities?" Some Court Records. The only way to understand what it really is is to read it.

I wish Hampstead and the Bronx were not so difficult. Well! - will have to accept facts as they are and will see more of you, I am sure with the New Year.

I hope your dear girl was rested and refreshed by her outing, and is "trig" and that you are in comfort and health. Mrs. A's. best regards and my love to both.

Always
