June 26, 1933

Dear Miss Tarbell:

Thank you for yours of June twenty-third. I think this ought to make a good article and I should think Graeve would take it. I can't conceive of his declining it unless he had an article by Mrs. Roosevelt herself, and she certainly has written or signed an awful lot of articles. But I think this is good and interesting. I'll put it up to Graeve and see what he says.

I made a copy of your notes and I return them herewith.

With reference to the article which you are going to write about Lincoln's anecdotes, you remember that I arranged with Chenery to order that article in April, 1929 and he agreed to order it then at two thousand dollars ($2,000.). As so much time has elapsed, I went round and talked with him and, in view of the depressed conditions, I told him, subject to your consent, we would reduce the price to fifteen hundred ($1500.). He said he would let me know. I have waited a week or so and he has never called me up as he said he would. I suppose he hesitates to order in these times.

I thought I would go ahead and tackle some other house and see if I could get an order, but before doing that I thought I would drop you a line and let you know the situation so that you could make any suggestion that you had, or tell me what you thought.

Yours sincerely,

Paul R. Reynolds
