

June 30, 1913.

Mr. F. S. Dewey,

Detroit, Mich.

My dear Sir:-

Your letter of June 25th sent to New York has just found me here. I want to thank you for your trouble in calling my attention to the clipping. The headlines certainly are misleading and unfair. There was nothing whatever in my remarks to justify them. What I did say and all that I said was that I believed that there were a certain number of women who had gone into the Suffrage Movement because they were revolting against their own uselessness, that they were tired of having nothing to do but amusing themselves, and that they saw a chance for useful activity through suffrage. That I considered this one of the healthiest signs of the times. I think you will agree with me that the headlines in the Free Press could not possibly have been fairly taken from those remarks.

As I said I am obliged to you for having called my attention to the clipping.

Very truly yours,
