

The real literary contribution of women is not at all in what they may write or publicly speak. It is in passing on a pure language - correct enunciation - pronunciation - a variety of words - selection of meaning - How could that they hear & see at last -

The most essential period is the period under her control - in matters she sees which she must control - nothing at all - anything else do as well -

Superlative place in human development - of the y labbing the latter woman - conscience - anathema - because educated - not sufficiently educated then - don't know the difference then they are being one - not interested couldn't do this because don't see the red heart of the world the life of the world - we have discovered the great law for training attention - a law of psychology of which no many matters do not know as if they learned it - in a book can never be reached that the more usefulness it ~~there~~ was its application to the mind -

James G. H. Helmholtz was opposite to this that attention is an active, absolutely subject to conscious will - cannot carry out purpose to keep attention fixed when interest is exhausted

"But we can set ourselves new questions about the object, so that a new interest in it arises, then the attention will remain fixed"

I don't know whether the lady

"The condition since quite non of sustained attention to a given topic of thought is that the mind will it - or is incessantly & consider different aspects & relation of it in turn" quote further p 224 - An education must suffer from this peculiarity would be the education par excellence.
