Decatur(Ill.) Herald.
4/14/15.

It was between 8 and 9 o'clock on the morning of MrLincoln's death, April 15th, that the news reached Decatur. It was such a shock that for a while the news was kept back from the people, but as soon as it was confirmed, the bells about the citywere tolled. The tolling of the bells aroused everybody and people poured from their homes to the down-town streets. The entire town displayed agony at the news. Men threw their arms around each other's necks and wept, and in fact, people everywhere were weeping. The feeling of general sadness later changed to a feeling of indignation.

There was a strange incidint in a local way in connection with the assassination. At that time there lived in Decatur, a Mrs.Hinkle, a spiritualistic medium, who was well known to the older residents. About 10 o'clock the night that Lincoln was shot, Mrs.Hinkle startled her family by jumping up tearing her hair, and screaming, "Mr.Lincoln has been killed. Mr.Lincoln has been shot. Why, they've killed Seward too!" She continued to scream in this way for an hour or so, also adding in her cries that they were going to burn Washington. A physician was called and quieted the woman, who was in hysterics. *

President Lincoln was shot about 10 o'clock on the night of April 14, 1865,at Ford's theatre in Washington, where the play,"American Cousin." was being presented by Laura Keene. The assassin J.Wilkes Booth, left the theatre about 9:30 and went to a nearby saloon, where he took a drink of brandy. Returning to the theatre, he made his way to the president's box. Holding a pistol in one hand and a knife in the other, he opened the box door and fired at Mr.Lincoln. Booth jumped quickly to the state, a high leap, but nothing to him. On the stage he fell and broke his leg, but he instantly arose, as if unhurt, andmbrandished his knife, at the same time shouting,"Sic Semper Tyrannis" Soon he disappeared.

* Next morning Mrs.Hinkle's little girls, who were afterwards Mrs.Jim Haworth and Mrs.Charles Allison, on their way to school were telling the other children about their mother's actions of the night before. The children were still talking about the matter when the bells began to toll and the news spread that Lincoln was dead. The children were greatly frightened and came running back to their homes.
