Dear Doctor Ely:

I am so sorry to be obliged to cancel my engagement with you for next Sunday, the nineteenth. I was counting on it, but I came home from my little lecture trip with a touch of influenza and the Doctor has put me to bed for a few days.

I hope that when I am in town again - I must go away next week for a few days if I am well enough - that you will let me make the visit to Radburn.

Regretting that I am not able to come Sunday, believe me

Very sincerely yours

Dr. Richard T. Ely
