

October 15, 1937

Dear Mr. Phillips:

Viola called me up today about the five chapters of my Recollections which she has just read. She seems to be interested in them but thinks you ought to read them. She is sending the manuscript back and suggested that I send it on to you with her criticisms. I gather, though I am not sure, that she thinks some of my comments are questionable. At all events I shall be deeply grateful if you will at your convenience look the stuff over. I could have improved it myself if I hadn't got to a point of weariness with it. It made me feel I better stop.

I am asking Mrs. Wolfe to send the manuscript to Goshen and to send Palmer's book along with it. If you should care to write me a line you can address me at Tarbell House - Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa. Doesn't Tarbell House sound important.

Love to the family

Faithfully yours

Mr. J. S. Phillips
Goshen, New York