

29 November, 1918

My dear Miss Tarbell:

I am sincerely glad to know from your letter of November 26th that you are going over to the other side, because I know how many persons over there will welcome your visit and how advantageous it will be for you to get into touch with the many liberal thinking people who are just now attempting to concert the peace measures of reform throughout the world.

I beg that if you should care to do so, you will present this letter to any of our representatives abroad whose advice you may need, and that you will allow me to say to them through this medium how entirely I trust you and how sincerely I hope that your visit will gain every object you have in view.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

(Signed) - WOODROW WILSON.
